A CORRECTION.

To the Editor of the Mirror. DEAR SIR:—In my last letter I stated that further correspondence on the subject in question was unnecessary, and fully intended to cease writing but unfortunately I am compelled to beg space in your valuable paper once more, in order to uphold my standard.

In your issue of August first Mr. Sherwood makes the statement that I wrote him a note in which I made an apology for my past actions. Before proceeding further I state emphatically that it is a most infamous lie, and is characteristic of what he has been writing since he began. I never made an apology and never shall. It's a lie, a whole lie and nothing but a lie. No doubt, Mr. Sherwood thought I had left Omemee and that in consequence was at perfect liberty to make any statements which perchance dropped into his feeble mind. The people of Omemee and intelligent localities are good and intelligent and too well acquainted with Mr. Sherwood to place much credence in his statements, so his infamous letter has done me no injury.

He assumes I made an open confession. Quite open indeed,—sent him a sealed note (so he says) which was read privately. Could you think of a more characteristic of what he has been writing since he began. I never made an apology and never shall. It's a lie, a whole lie and nothing but a lie. No doubt, Mr. Sherwood thought I had left Omemee and that in consequence was at perfect liberty to make any statements which perchance dropped into his feeble mind. The people of Omemee and intelligent localities are good and intelligent and too well acquainted with Mr. Sherwood to place much credence in his statements, so his infamous letter has done me no injury.

in saying that the only common sense matter in your letters is copied from mine of the week previous. Your letters have dwindled away down to freezing point since. I cannot write. You had no difficulty in filling two or three columns then, but now you are obliged to quit with one short, empty paragraph, like your last. Try and think of something yourself, or is your brain as void of sense or reason as your letters? The public is inclined to believe it is.

Mr. S. would almost scare you with those great Latin phrases. Some of the High School boys must have told him these, because he is not capable of writing Latin so properly. He thinks I have never studied Latin. Try and think of something yourself, or is your brain as void of sense or reason as your letters? The public is inclined to believe it is.
