Sherwood, son of our esteemed townsman, Mr. W. Sherwood: "A most excellent portrait of Major Harry Pellatt in undress uniform, shows W. A. Sherwood's latest work. The flesh colour is quiet and rich, and the likeness perfectly natural; it is an admirable portrait. Mr. Sherwood is also a portrait of Mrs. Pellatt on the Southern wall, the colour of which is refined and the pose of the subject is admirable. Mr. Sherwood has the head quite poetic." Mr. Sherwood has the congratulations of a large number of friends in this vicinity on his success.

STRUCK BY A TRAIN

The Deadly Crossing.

A YOUNG MAN FATALLY INJURED LAST EVENING.

Death Resulted From the Injuries at Three O'clock this Morning.

A Deploable Accident—The 6.25 Train Going North-Crossed the Farmer's Wagon—The Driver's Right Leg Fearfully Mangled and One of the Horses Killed.

One of the most lamentable occurrences that it has been our duty to chronicle for years past took place last evening about 6.45 p.m., at the dangerous point known as Fenelon crossing on the Grand Trunk R. R., about two miles north-west of this town.

At about 6.25 the Cobocook train, in charge of Conductor Greaves and Driver Deyman, pulled out from the station here on the w. y. north, and at about the same time a young man named Obediah Campbell, about 19 years of age, who works for Messrs. Easton and James H. Hopkins, of West Ops, turned slowly north from the Oakwood road and approached the crossing, driving a team of horses attached to a hay rack. Several other teams were also driving out on the Cambray church opening saw the vehicle ahead of them until it disappeared over the hill leading to the crossing. A few minutes later when the train was about to pass and saw the train ahead below, they realized that an accident must have happened, and such unfortunately proved to be the case.

The sight that greeted their eyes was indeed a terrible one. About twenty feet from the crossing, up against the steep bank, they found the unfortunate hay driver, with his right leg ground almost into a jelly from the knee down; one of the horses had been carried along a short distance under the wheels of the train and crushed into an unrecognizable mass, while the other animal lay on its back in the ditch alongside the rails.

The first care of Conductor Greaves and the train hands was for the wounded boy. The belt rope was unhooked and transformed into a rude tourniquet above the knee to lessen the excessive flow of blood, and the young man was then carried as tenderly as possible to the train, which had backed down to the station, where the Grand Trunk surgeons, Drs. Simpson and Kemp, were quickly in attendance. Under their care Campbell was removed to Mauder's hotel in Peterboro, where with Mrs. Paole and Burrows, the mangled limb was amputated above the knee. It was considered extremely doubtful that the poor fellow could survive the shock of the nervous system and the loss of blood, and unfortunately their fears proved true—at two o'clock this morning he became a weak and at three o'clock he passed away.

The railway men state that they were running at the rate of about twelve miles per hour when the accident happened. The usual whistles had been sounded for the train, but the driver saw a team on the track. The driver apparently tried to back the horses off, as they were facing west when the engine started. One of the horses was found in the ditch uninjured by a party of bicyclists who happened along a few minutes after the train had started towards the town. The poor being was wedged in so tightly that he had to be pried out with a scantling, and when freed was so nervous that he could hardly stand.

The crossing where the accident occurred is a dangerous one. It is a narrow escape there during the past ten or twelve years. We understand that upon more than one occasion grand juries have returned in their presentments, but no action was taken, and he has required the sacrifice of a human life to awaken the parties at fault from their culpable lethargy. The public safety requires an overhead bridge at that crossing, and gates in charge of a watchman. It is said that parties who were in the neighborhood advised that the train never whistled for the crossing. This is extremely improbable, as Conductor Greaves and Driver Deyman are both careful men. A strong wind was blowing from the west at the time, and the noise of a heavy wagon would be quite likely to drown the sound of the whistle.

An inquest will be held this evening at Mauder's hotel, when no doubt additional facts will be secured.

Up to noon today the railway authorities and others were unable to find out where the boy's parents lived. When questioned by the medical men the boy said they lived a few miles north of Fenelon, but not above that village knew of their whereabouts. We have since learned that John Campbell, the father, resides at Burnt River.

The accident has cast a gloom over the whole community. The Messrs. Hopkins, the lad's employers, are especially grieved, as they thought highly of the deceased.—Lindsay Post of Tuesday.

Re-Opening of St. Luke's Church, Downeyville.

St. Luke's Church, which has undergone extensive improvements, under the able supervision of Rev. Father Bretherton, was re-opened for Divine Service on Sunday, Sep. 22. His Lordship, Right Rev. R. A. O'Connor, Bishop of Peterboro, assisted by a number of the clergy who will be present on the occasion. Services commence at 10.30 a.m. and 4 p.m. Dinner will be provided for those wishing to remain for the afternoon service, for which a nominal fee will be charged. The services will be very interesting and impressive, and, no doubt, a large number will be present. The church, as now completed with manse, is excelled by none in the province outside the cities and large towns.

HAPPILY WEDDED.

Mr. Frederick McQuade, and Miss Lavina McConnell, of Emily, Join Hands in Matrimony.

A very pleasing event took place last evening, in the Bethel Methodist Church, when Mr. Joseph McConnell gave his eldest daughter, Lavina, in marriage to Mr. Frederick McQuade, one of Emily's prosperous young farmers. The groom was ably assisted by Mr. T. Loves, while Miss Minnie McConnell, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid. Rev. Jno. Garbutt officiated. After the nuptial knot was tied, the friends of the happy couple repaired to the home of the bride, where a sumptuous repast had been provided by the bride's mother, and after all had done ample justice to the bountiful spread, the evening was spent in conversation and games of various kinds. The company dispersed at an early hour, wishing the bride and groom a long life of wedded happiness in which the Mirror heartily joins.
