CURRENT NOTES

The prevailing cheapness of literature is one of the most interesting and important facts in the history of modern civilization. There has never before been a time when abundant reading The Christian and Common Sense View of matter was placed within such easy reach of all classes. The average citizen is no longer deprived of the opportunity of increasing his stock of information and gratifying his literary tastes by reason of his pecuniary limiload of books for less than a few volumes fault if he does not keep himself fully interest, and gain acquaintance with the best authors in every branch of literature. By the expenditure of a dollar a week, a library covering all kinds of knowledge in a general way can soon be accumulated. It is not
