CANADIAN LOYALTY.

No concern in this country enjoys the confidence of the Canadian people more than the "Family Herald and Weekly Star," of Montreal. Ever promise they make is carried out to the letter, regardless of cost. Their promise of a fitting souvenir for the closing year of this century is more than fulfilled. Nothing more suitable than the two pictures "Battle of Alma" and "Pony Riders" could be imagined. Old subscribers are showing their loyalty to their favourite paper by renewing early and in many cases getting a friend to become a subscriber as well.

The Middle Road Powl Supper and entertainment held recently was the most successful affair of the kind ever held in connection with the Church. Those who took part were Revs. T. Brown, J. M. Garbutt, C. H. Coon, R. M. Pope, Messrs T. J. Parsons, Henry Sheawood, Geo. Norris, W. S. Graham, Wallace Graham, and the Misses Annie, Carrie, and Harmony Balfour. Dr. Thompson filled the chair very efficiently. The proceeds of tea and social amounted to $66. The ladies of congregation as usual had prepared ample provisions for the large crowd and deserve credit for the good attention given to all.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

The Giving of Gifts Should be Much Simplified.

In the December Ladies' Home Journal Edward Bok writes in vigorous depreciation of the complicating of Christmas. "Much as we need simplicity in all the phases of our living," he contends, "its greatest need is sometimes felt at Christmas. And it seems a pity that we cannot make a beginning there. We could if we would simplify this question of presents. If we would leave out of our consideration all but the natural promptings of our hearts. If ever material considerations should be dismissed from our minds and lives it should be in connection with Christmas. If ever our friends should see our heart—our real inner selves—it should be on Christmas Day. Not that we should be other than our real selves on other days. But as it is, we are not our actual selves on the day of all days when we should be. See how we strive that our present of this year shall surpass the one we gave last year! See how instinctively we think of the material value of what we give, and actually of what we receive! See how we wrong ourselves by leaving needless things undone and inviting illness because we feel we must give something of our own making to a friend, when really a sigh goes into each stitch, instead of being frank with ourselves, and pleasing our friends infinitely more by being frank with them, and purchasing something at far less cost to our health. Every woman knows what I mean by this; the great evil of 'making things' for Christmas presents when really neither the time nor the strength can be spared. In much the same way we complicate Christmas at the table."

The Man with the Nose of a Strawberry Hue.

In this rising young country we've men of all kinds; We've men of decision and different minds. We have men who are thoughtless, and last in review

Comes the man with the nose of a strawberry hue.

He's a queer sort of creature, this jewel so rude, Despising the ways of the loud-dressing dude.

He has ways of his own, though unpollished 'tis true Is the man with the nose of a strawberry hue.

There are men of high learning, and men who are bright, And men whose tall figures are always a sight; But learning and beauty have nothing to do

With the man with the nose of a strawberry hue.

Yet he always is loyal, in dark days or fine, Though his speeches are mainly "No sugar in mine"; But a florist by nature, a fruit grower too,

Is the man with the nose of a strawberry hue.

On special occasions he talks in a stream, His figures and fancies a beautiful dream.

And you'd think that past glories he still could renew, Could the man with the nose of a strawberry hue.

Oh! well for the nation if never he'd been seen The glass that to drink to the dregs he is keen;

For then much of fair Canada's fame might be due To the man with the nose of a strawberry hue.
