

Sunday Morning At St. Andrew's

On Sunday morning at St. Andrew's the Rev. Francis P. Chisholm told the children that they would explore the church together. They would consider the different parts of the church and the furniture that helped in worship. In some ways it was like a ship at sea. Someone on board the ship must know the way, the different channels and how to steer the boat. Everyone obeyed the captain gladly because they knew that he knew the way, and they wanted to arrive safely. With the ship of the church-worship someone must know when to sing, read the Scripture, preach and pray, so all may go safely. The minister in the pulpit was like the captain on the bridge. The minister is there not to exalt himself, but the holy word. All must listen to learn God's will.

The subject of the sermon was the "Holy Family" and the text was taken from Luke 2:49 "How is it that ye sought me? Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"

The coming of age was an important event in any life. In our land at 21 young person is given the vote and allowed to take part in the affairs of the nation. But even before 21 he is allowed to drive a car and to join the armed forces. He is recognized as having a sense of responsibility. The Jewish boy at the age of 12 officially became a son of the law. In the synagogue he read the Scripture and answered questions. He was considered a man and required to obey the ceremonial law, and to make a pilgrimage to Jerusalem for the feast of the Passover.

When young persons became full members of the church by confirmation it was by an act of God and the church. They were strengthened by the Holy

LEG SHOW?

Spirit, made a public profession of faith, and were admitted to the Lord's supper. Most conversions were made between the ages of 12 and 25. It was a matter of great concern that young people should respond to God's call and follow him as Christ and Lord. He quoted "Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth." It was a critical time of life.

The years of preparation in Jesus' life have been called the "silent years". He developed physically, grew and waxed strong, kept his body a fit temple of the Holy Spirit. His mind expanded. He was always ready to learn. The greatest men continued to be learners until death. Mozart took lessons in counterpoint. A great painter at 70 felt that if he had just ten years more he could really paint as he wanted to.

Jesus lived a life good for a sturdy boy. He learned about the world around him, about the reapers, the shepherd and the carpenter, and used this knowledge later in his teaching. His school days with the rabbi in the synagogue fed his alert mind. In his home with his mother and Joseph he learned lessons of kindness and helpfulness.

One event in his boyhood is recorded when at the age of 12 he made the 3-day trek to Jerusalem for the passover festival. In the temple the scribes and rabbis were surprised at the boy's understanding. He enquired not as a conceited or precocious youth, but with the eager seriousness of a keen student.

When the days of the feast were over preparations were made for the journey homeward to Nazareth. Mary thought Jesus was with Joseph, and Joseph thought He was with his mother. It was not until evening they discovered Jesus was not in the company.

The next morning they hurried back to Jerusalem to find him. When finally they found him in the temple he replied in the words of the text "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" He recognized God, the creator of the stars and the beauty of nature as His Father. He went back to Nazareth and was subject to his parents. He found the presence of God in the home and gave the name of Father to God.

It was the responsibility of parents to lead little ones to a knowledge of Christ as Father and Friend. The parents should say "come with me to church and Sunday School so that together we may learn the Father's will for the family". Then as children they may learn to develop in grace and to win favour with God and man.

Mr. Chisholm said that during the past week the fellowship of prayer had been enjoyed by all four churches of the community together. He appealed to congregation to make every week a week of prayer, and to make 1957 a year of prayer. The choir sang "Give to our God Immortal Praise" under the direction of Miss Mabel Clarry, who was at the organ. D.I.
