INTRODUCING REINDEER INTO ALASKA

Aftempt to Supply Better Food for the Natives of That Territory.

The landing at Port Clarence, Alaska, of a herd of 180 domesticated reindeer purchased in Siberia, together with four native Siberian herders, marks the establishment of the first herd of the kind on the western continent.

This is an event of more than ordinary importance, says the Californian. If it is successful it will create throughout northern and central Alaska a new food supply in place of the walrus, whale, fish, and fur-bearing land animals, that are yearly becoming scarcer and more difficult to ob-

With the increase and civilization of the natives and the general introduction of the domesticated reindeer herds throughout Alaska the vast unknown interior of the northern province can be thoroughly explored. Lines of communication between distant settlements can be kept open during the long winter months, and the frigid, bleak, and now comparatively useless plains of that little-known region will become a source of wealth and prosperity to the land.

In the arctic and subarctic regions of Lapland and Siberia the domesticated reindeer is food, clothing, house furniture, and transportation to the people.

Its milk and flesh furnish food, its marrow and tongue are considered choice delicacies, and its blood mixed with the contents of the stomach is made into a favorite dish called in Siberia manyalla.

Its intestines are cleaned, filled with tallow, and eaten as a sausage. #### Canadian Caitle in Great Britain.

Speaking of the scheduling of Canadian cattle by the British authorities a cablegram Europeans well known for their work on It was enough if the latter would cut in from London dated Feb. 22nd says:-The documents from Ottawa setting forth officially the reasons in the case why the schedule against Canadian cattle should be removed have reached the Imperial authorities. These, no doubt, will do much good; but what is likely to have more effect, however, is the cable stating that the Government of Canada has decided to enforce a 90 days' quarantine against the United States through the Northwest and elsewhere. The Board of Agriculture authorities now admit that so long as the quarantine was not enforced Canadian cattle could not be regarded by them as above suspicion. It was thought when the news of the quarantine regulations was received that thrilling combats with the terrors of the register of deeds for Halifax county, he landed in Great Britain alive would cease to a great extent. Such, however, is not the case. The critics are now asking how the Government of the Dominion proposes to enforce the quarantine regulations enacted throughout such an immense territory, where not even a fence divides Canada from the United States. Notwithstanding these remarks and unfriendly suggestions the action of the Canadian Government has greatly strengthened Canada's position toward having the schedule rescinded."

Referring to the subject spoken of in the preceding paragraph it should be stated that as the results of a conference held by Mr. John Lowe, Deputy Minister of Agriculture; Mr. A. M. Burgess, Deputy Minister of the interior; and Mr. Frederick White, Comptroller of the North-West Mounted Police, with a view to arriving at some practical scheme for the enforcement of the cattle quarantine regulations along the frontier of the North-West Territories it has been decided that the work shall be placed in the hands of the North-West Mounted Police, whose knowledge of the trails and of the whole country will enable them to prevent the smuggling of cattle from the United States. It is understood that the Government has decided, with reference to the quarantine of cattle of settlers moving in across the border, to make such arrangements for the care of the cattle that the necessary detention of ninety days will give as little cause of complaint as possible to the settlers.
