

Clifford Blackman
A Boston Boy's Eyesight Saved—Perhaps His Life

By Hood's Sarsaparilla—Blood Poisoned by Canker.

Read the following from a grateful mother: "My little boy had Scarlet Fever when 4 years old, and it left him very weak and with blood poisoned with canker. His eyes became so inflamed that his sufferings were intense, and for seven weeks he

Could Not Open His Eyes. I took him twice during that time to the Eye and Ear Infirmary on Charles Street, but their remedies failed to do him the faintest shadow of good. I commenced giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla and it soon cured him. I have never doubted that it saved his sight, even if not his very life. You may use this testimonial in any way you choose. I am always ready to sound the praise of

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Because of the wonderful good it did my son."

The Caron charges were disposed of by Mr. Edgar's amendment to the motion to go into supply being defeated by a motion of 60 for to 119 against. It is generally believed that that will be the last "fighting" motion of the session. The debate on the Caron charges was resumed by Hon. Mr. Davies, who made a long and elaborate speech, dealing mostly in generality and condemning the Postmaster-General more on account of the deductions to be drawn from the evidence itself.

Sir Richard Cartwright followed, and read the draft of a facious bill to the effect that in future any one accused of an offence should have the right to select his own judge and jury and fix his own manner of trial. Also that a person accused of one crime should be acquitted if found not guilty of some other offence with which he was not charged. For instance, a man accused of murder must be acquitted if it was shown that he was innocent of adultery and so on. It was pointed that no member of a Liberal administration should have the benefit of the act.

After Sir Richard's burst of humor, Mr. McCarthy very seriously announced that he should vote for the amendment, although he did not believe that the Postmaster-General had any personal interest in the matter, or that it affected his conduct as a member of Parliament.

The House then divided and Mr. Edgar's amendment was lost by 50 majority. Messrs. McCarthy, O'Brien, Weldon and Calvin voted with the minority.

TWO CENT POSTAGE.
On motion to go into supply Mr. Charlton made a long speech in favor of the adoption of a 2-cent postage rate. He reviewed the history of cheap postage in Great Britain and the United States, especially the latter. He showed that the reduction of revenue in the United States caused by the reduction of postage had been very brief, and argued that the same thing would occur in Canada if a two cent rate was adopted.

In conclusion he moved: "That this House is of the opinion that the domestic and American rate of postage, with due regard for this public interest, be reduced to two cents for letters of one ounce or less in weight."

Sir Adolphe Caron said he had studied the question of a reduction of the rate of postage, but the result had not justified his recommending it. He claimed that considering the territory to be covered Canada had the best postal service in the world. In remote parts of the country we had tri-monthly and semi-monthly mails when in corresponding sections of the United States there was only a monthly mail. The reduction of postage in the United Kingdom was not brought about on the ground of the previous postage being too high, but by departmental rearrangement. In the United States the rate was reduced because the postal revenue was largely in excess of the expenditure. The result of the reduction of the rate had been to create a large deficit. In the first nine months this deficit was $3,079,000. The next year the deficit was $6,756,000. Judging from the result in other countries he estimated that the loss of revenue to Canada by the adoption of the two-cent rate would be about $950,000 a year. If any reduction in letter postage was made it would be necessary to at once re-impose the postage on newspapers and other printed matter now carried free.

After some remarks by Dr. Landerkin and Mr. Mills (Bothwell) Mr. Charlton's amendment was lost on division.

TUBERCULOSIS.

At a meeting of the Agricultural Committee Prof. McKechan recommended that Parliament be asked to grant $500,000 to stamp out tuberculosis. This sum, he said, would be sufficient to buy all affected cattle, and which should at once be slaughtered. He also recommended that instead of a veterinary surgeon being sent from Canada, Sir Charles Tupper be empowered to employ three veterinary surgeons in Scotland to be present at the slaughter of cattle from Canada, and recommended for the purpose Professors Williams and Weller of Edinburgh and McCaul of Glasgow.

Prof. McKechan announced that the Hudson Bay Company intends to slaughter a herd of cattle in the Peace River district as soon as a veterinary surgeon can get there—the herd suffering from tuberculosis. In the meantime the cattle are isolated. He claims that tuberculosis is communicable to man, this being the base for his recommendation of such a large grant for stamping it out.

THE ROYAL WILLIAM.

There was a meeting of members in room 34, called by the Toronto members, to consider the advisability of requesting the Government to take some steps to commemorate the crossing of the Atlantic by the first steamer, the Royal William, in 1833. It was agreed to ask the Government to put up a brass tablet either in Ottawa or Quebec, and also to ask that the public documents relating to the crossing be collected in pamphlet form for distribution at the World's Fair, where a model of the Royal William will be exhibited.

In the Committee on Agriculture Mr. M. Burgess, Deputy Minister of the Interior, gave evidence as to the steps taken to promote emigration from the United States. Mr. Carpenter thought that it was a waste of money to bring back to Canada persons who had left Canada because they were not successful, who had not succeeded in the United States and who were not likely to be successful anywhere. Dr. Roome and Mr. McGregor also spoke against spending money for this purpose, and Mr. Macdonald, (Assiniboia), said that these immigrants who had been brought into Canada from the United States had proven failures.

A resolution was passed recognizing the services of Professor Robertson in connection with the dairy interests of Canada and recommending his employment on the permanent staff of the Central Experimental Farm at a good salary.
