LOCAL GIRL PLACES 1st. AT MUSIC FESTIVAL

At the music festival in Peterborough on Friday evening, Helen Ingham of Millbrook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Ingham, Tupper Street, placed first in a class of nine competitors in Shakespearean Drama for girls sixteen years and under. Helen chose the part of Lady Macbeth in Macbeth Act I, Scene 7. Commenting on her work, Miss Esme Crampton, speech coach at the Stratford festival, said: "A very promising quality. She met the challenge of the play well. Good voice, good sense of command on stage." She thought the sense of revenge could have been built up a little more, but that Lady Macbeth was a part Helen play in years to come. The Mirror-Reporter joins with the rest of Helen's friends in congratulating her on this fine showing.

Seen on King Street During The Week

A robin—last summer.

D. R. Fowler crossing the road just to get to the other side.

Gerry E. Todd's truck loaded with new farm machinery. You just cannot keep these signs of spring from showing up.

Two sparrows with a straw in their bill all ready to pick their teeth, but we're more inclined to think it's just another sign of spring and that they are really going to build a nest.

Two small girls not yet of school age from the looks of their size, each with a candy cigarette in their mouth and going through the motions. There is an old saying "as the old cock crows the young ones learn". Now it can be changed to "as the old hen clucks the young chicks learn".

SEEN IN TORONTO

Two young ladies who were Thursday visitors to Toronto had quite an experience when they suddenly found out that the TTC has more than one bus driver. A former Millbrook boy they knew drove a bus so when they stopped the bus yelling hey Wally, remember me. Reply from bus driver I'm not Wally. You are too Wally. I'm Mary, another voice I'm Gertrude. The climax was a sight to see when they finally realized that Wally was on another bus.

At Union Station

What two young ladies were so fascinated by the terraza floor in this station that they had to test it by crawling around the stairwell on their hands and knees to the amazement of fellow travellers.
