No longer is it possible to farm without investing a lot in land, equipment and stock. No longer is it safe to let farm animals, tractors and other slow moving farm vehicles go along the road without having our dependable liability insurance.

Ontario farmers, through CIA their own insurance company, have a farm family liability policy that meets their needs. See your CIA representative for helpful information on CIA's FFL policy.

Willmott Strong with four or five plow points under his arm. Looks as though Willmott is really going to turn up the dirt, so beware all ye bad actors!

Mr. Cecil Peebles standing in his store doorway with a large cardboard box held in front of him, hoping that someone might drop in a penny. This failed to materialize as Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Farrow were standing there too, and passers-by knew that with associates like them he didn't need money.

A dog enjoying a ride in the back of a vehicle become so excited by the barking of two other "blood hounds" that paced it up the street, that it lost its balance and fell out on the road. "Hard on the whiskers" said Ted McDowell. However, the dog later appeared again in the car none the worse for its experience.

A baby toad not much bigger than a pea, hopping along the sidewalk as though it were a giant. Good job no one's No. 10's trod on it. Had it not been Sunday we would have captured it and put it in training for the next frog jumping contest. You know what they say: "train 'em while they're young and when they are old they won't depart from it."

A fire break out amongst garbage back of the Nattress' barber shop. Likely caused by a careless smoker or kids playing with matches.

Ed. Thornton with neck out thrust, you fancy how, hands on hips, and legs out wide, at the corner of King and Tupper, gazing up the Cavan road. As Ed. is an employee of the County Roads Department he probably knows more about the Cavan road just now than anyone, and what drew his attention in such a prominent Napoleon position is hard to say.

Three tractors all hitched to a building that looked much like "Uncle Tom's Cabin" with Uncle Tom standing in the doorway, the only difference this Uncle Tom was white in colour instead of black. The last peek we took at the caravan it was in the neighbourhood of the United Church and still going strong. Surely it couldn't have been some localities prison with the jail bird inside being transferred bag and baggage to our new reformatory could it? Anyway it was heading in that direction. Bet my little glass alie that this was the cause of Ed. Thornton's stance.

Mr. Fred C. White, in his 85th year discussing the hot spell with a farmer. Someone was heard to say that Fred was like the weather too, he wouldn't go much above 96.

It is said that Alexander The Great wept because there were no more worlds to conquer. Wonder if anyone is weeping because there is no more clothes to take off by some of our wearers of shorts, on King St.

Mrs. Marjorie Jelly of Toronto was the guest of Mrs. W. West over the weekend.

A local man hold up a small screwdriver (that would do honour to a jeweller) and ask Ed. Thornton if he wanted to borrow a screwdriver, to which he replied, "yes, if its small enough I'll give you a job right away". Upon coming closer to see the tool, he said "just what I've been looking for to tighten the screws in my glasses," and sure enough the job was done right on King St., and best of all there was no charge.

The above does away with the old saying that "nothing good ever comes out of fooling" for in this case it did.

Weldon Coulter limping about due to a stone striking him on the ankle while mowing grass with a power mower. When these mowers throw a stone they don't fool, you know you've been hit for weeks.
