REV. H. C. QUINN MEETS WITH PAINFUL ACCIDENT

While descending some steps at the Rectory on Tuesday, July 30th, the Rev. H. C. Quinn, B.A., Lth., rector of Cavan Parish, had the misfortune to fall and give his right elbow a bod smash, the large bone in the forearm being knocked out of the elbow, which proved very painful. Mr. Quinn had planned to leave on his holidays at the time of the accident, but had to call hem off. He is now going about with his arm in a cast and sling, which will have to be on until the end of September.

We wish Mr. Quinn no lasting ill effects due to his mishap, and hope to see him in his usual good-natured self again in the near future.

FIRE WORKS AT WALLACE POINT

Last week while going to the store house for oil, Herb Cardwell of Wallace Point, was surprised to have a beam of light shine in his face. The colour was not of the searchlight variety, but a queer reddish hue, but seemed confined to a beam. He could also notice the round disk on the clouds from the light. After pinching himself to see if he was awake, he looked about and saw it was coming from a field across the way, so he went to investigate. When he arrived there the light seemed to be in the next field, so he continued his journey of investigation, and after going over a hill he found an old pine tree that had been struck by lightning at one time, that was hollow and partly dead, had been struck for the second time and set on fire, the hollow decayed centre making a natural chimney for the fire to go up, and this was the cause of the queer beam of light.

Herb thinks the spot on the clouds he noticed was caused by the flames being channelled straight up, and the fire-works-like sparkles caused as the walls of the tree trunk was weakened by the fire, causing the green branches to fall and flare up as pine will do.

Herb, who is a chain saw dealer in Peterborough, says that people can't tell him that lightning doesn't strike in the same place twice, as this tree finally met its doom by being hit twice, the first time partly killing it, and the second time making it a hades.

A number of the Girl Guides who spent ten days at camp on Pigeon Lake, tanned to such an extent that its a safe bet they weren't inside long enough to wash the pots and pans.

AUTOMATIC TELEPHONE ANSWERING AND RECORDING SET

If you sometimes hesitate to leave your home or office because you're afraid of missing a telephone call, the latest electronic device to appear in Ontario can go a long way toward solving your problem.

You now can have an automatic answer your telephone and take messages from the caller when you are absent. Admittedly, a "secretary" made of tubes, relays and wire is not as attractive as the kind that uses lipstick, but it does have trim lines. The equipment is encased in a compact console about the size of a table radio and harmonizes with most office and home furnishings.

One of Ontario's first automatic telephone answering and recording sets has been installed by the Bell Telephone Co. at Aurora, in the office of a chartered accountant. Others are scheduled to go into service elsewhere in Ontario shortly.

When the telephone rings, the automaton on duty answers, delivering a pre-recorded message, up to 28 seconds long, inviting the caller to leave a message. The equipment gives the caller up to half-a-minute of message time. A total of 10 minutes message time can be recorded on any number of calls.

A series of double beep tones tells the caller when to start recording, and a second pair beeps tells when the recording period is nearly ended. All messages are recorded on a revolving drum, and can be erased after the play-back, when no longer required. If the user wishes, he may adjust the equipment for answering only, without taking messages.

Most likely to benefit from this built-in telephone attendant are doctors, lawyers, insurance and real estate agents, television repairmen, and others who maintain small offices without sufficient personnel to necessitate a full-time attendant. The set works with individual residence or business telephone lines, or in conjunction with a switchboard.

LEG CUT BY BREAKING DISH

Freak accidents do happen, and right here in Millbrook.

While washing dishes recently, Mrs. Bev Reid dropped one and turned quickly to see where it went, at the same instant a piece of the dish that had broken, flew up and hit her on the calf of the leg, causing a nasty cut that required medical attention and several stitches to close.

This is a sequel to the freak accident reported in last week's Reporter, when Weldon Coulter was hit on the ankle by a stone thrown by a power lawn mower, that also required medical attention.

The moral of this story is—Don't wash dishes, and don't cut grass.

Just Out of The Blue...

An accident is just a word until you have one, so say the signs on the billboards... True in a way. An accident or a sickness comes to another "just out of the blue" it seems.

A wise man, plans for such emergencies with accident and sickness insurance.

It will cost only a little time to see how CIA can serve you with accident and sickness insurance. See your CIA representative:
