EDITORIAL OF SORTS

(From Page 1)

King Street, up close. True or false to reality, the editorial was not complimentary to Millbrook. It was the sort of publicity we can do with out. But we commend Editor Russell for re, a commenting u, e saw. For what he saw wh at so many see. And the shame is not on him for what he reported, but on all of us villagers for allowing such a conversation-piece to remain.

Now, darnit, The Toronto Telegram has reprinted Mr. Russell's editorial, and our fair village gets more unfavourable publicity.

It really doesn't matter what others think of Millbrook as long as we who live here are happy with things the way they are.

We have yet to meet anyone who does not come here because of our unattractive business block of King Street. No one has yet proved that business suffers because of the boarded-up ruins and the rubble and the bricks.

We gran you that King Street's business bloik does not make visitors wish they lived here; but who wants the visitors to live here any way?

If more people come here to live, and accommodation becomes scarce, the rents will go up; and higher rents will be a hardship on the nice good people already paying more than they feel

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Allin visited the CNE on Saturday, Warriors Day. Clifford served with the 3rd Battalion.

they should. Mind you, the value of dwellings and lots and business places will go up too; but nobody here is a "speculator" and nobody wants to move away, so what good are higher values?

If parents with children move into our fair village, our schools get crowded, & we may have to raise taxes to provide buildings and staff; and nobody wants higher taxes—unless it's higher taxes for the other fellow to (Please see Page 4)
