 —Mrs. W. H. Russell and Miss Greer spent a week in Toronto during the exhibition.

 —Among the large number that visited Peterborough exhibition on Tuesday last we noticed Wm. Vance the secretary of the East Durham and Cavan Agricultural societies.
 —Manvers Agricultural society's fall show takes place at Bethany on Tuesday and Wednesday next. Manvers is noted for their fall exhibitions and this year will be no exception to the rule.
 —"Harry C," the black trotter owned by Mr. Harry Nattaus distinguished himself on Saturday last by taking first place in the free-for-all at Orono. Three horses competed and trotted five heats. "Harry C" was the favorite from the start and won easily.
 —The East Durham and Cavan agricultural exhibition takes place on Thursday and Friday next. Although this show has made wonderful strides towards success in the past few years, this year is likely to eclipse them all. About six acres of new ground has been added to the original grounds and a half-mile track constructed, new sheds are in course of erection and will be completed in time for this year's show, new fences have been built around the ground and with other minor improvements Millbrook now possesses one of the best driving parks in the district. The directors and officers are putting forth every effort to make the exhibition of 1893 the best ever held, and from present indications they will succeed as the entries are already pouring in in such profusion that the energetic secretary is kept on the jump.

—Prof. Jas. Fax with an entirely new programme will appear in the town hall here on Friday evening Oct. 6th. Don't fail to hear him. Proceeds to be devoted to the purchasing of a fire bell.
 —Kells, Fowler & Co. are offering a special prize at the Millbrook fall show. Guessers will call at store and secure a card on which to make their guess, which must be returned not later than Friday noon, Oct. 6. For the information of guessers we might state that the receipts for 1891 were $253.05, and for 1892, $238.95. The names of the successful guessers will appear in following issue of THE REPORTER.
 —R. J. Doak offers the following seasonable goods in large assortment Grain Cradles, Scythes, Snags, Forks, Fork Handles, Turnip Hoes. Car load of Binder Twine at rock bottom prices to cash dealers. Perfection Machine Oil and pure English Paris Green are his specialties.
 —The annual harvest festival and tea in connection with Trinity Church was held on Monday evening 25th. The day was cool but the attendance was sufficiently large to fill the church and to make a successful holiday. The Ven. Archdeacon Allen was present, and presided with his usual good humor and vivacity. The local ministers had been invited but were unable to attend. H. A. Ward, Esq., of Port Hope was present and in a neat and appropriate speech dwelt upon some of the aspects of the harvest and congratulated both clergy and people on the prosperity of the parish of Cavan, he also gave a finished recitation during the course of the evening. The Millbrook brass band was present and by its inspiring music added much to the enjoyment of the occasion. A beautiful tea was provided on the grounds and the general verdict was that the "tiffin" and "dhrinkin'" was beautiful and fine. At the close of the programme the chairman in fitting words expressed his pleasure at seeing so many gathered together and expressed the hope that those present of the various christian bodies would assist in the work of christian union by employing such opportunities of meeting together. The church was tastefully decorated with fruits, grain and flowers, and presented a truly harvest home appearance. The following programme was rendered and much appreciated by those present: hymn by the Sunday school children; instrumental duet, Millbrook band; address, H. A. Ward, Esq.; recitation, Miss Powers; duet, Mrs. and Miss Todd; recitation, Miss Lizzie Shaw; instrumental, band; song, Miss Powers; instrumental, Miss Irene Fee; song, Mrs. and Miss Todd; march, Miss Lizzie Fallis; address, Ven. Archdeacon Allen.
 —"Music bath charms" it is said and certainly in the mesmer hands of Jno. and Wm. Cosgrove harmony might easily be brought out of a picket fence. The town band have just reason to congratulate themselves not only in the success of the undertaking but in placing such an entertainment within reach of the community. Jno. Cosgrove is certainly a prodigy and if he may not be able to perform the Irishman's impossibility "to whistle and chew mule," at one and the same time he certainly manipulated a quartette of instruments simultaneously himself to the admiration of the audience. Will Cosgrove is not far behind his brother, although the parts taken by him were of second place, but the little favorite seemed to call forth the most uproarious outbursts of the young men. Ada Cosgrove takes her part well although not so young as her appearance in "Mamma went you buy me that" would indicate. Harry Fay makes a very good comic and particularly in the "shop walker" gave our young counter-hoppers such pointers as will no doubt enable them to sell their customers not only what they want but more especially what they do not want and do it with all the suavity of the "don't you know" style. Miss LaDell although not a heavy card in her line, gave some very acceptable renditions, and her Delsarte attitudes were certainly well presented and altogether the Cosgrove Co. may expect a good house should they return at a future date, and the band need not be ashamed of the value they gave the public for their money.
 —The annual harvest festival in connection with Christ church, Ballieboro, was held on Sunday and Monday, 24th and 25th inst. A special service with appropriate hymns was held in the church on Sunday at 3 p.m., when an excellent practical sermon was preached by the Rev. R. Rooney of Perrytown—there was a good congregation and an offertory of $11.00. On Monday the usual tea was held in the basement, and from 4 to 7 p.m. A lively and busy scene was presented in rendering the interesting programme of supplying the wants of the inner man. After tea all adjourned upstairs to the beautifully appointed church, which certainly was dressed in most beautiful festive attire—the chancel was a picture in which were tastefully blended the varied colours of field produce, grain and vegetables, and the choicest domestic flowers, with blooms as fresh as the early spring—no wonder that one of the speakers found a fruitful source of remark in this scene of natural loveliness. Never did Christ church wear a more becoming and beautiful dress. The Rev. W. C. Allen presided. The Rev's Messrs. Farncourt of Fenelon Falls, Rooney of Perrytown were also present and gave addresses as well as Mr. Pilkey, of Ballieboro, who alone of the local ministers was able to attend. For three hours those present were entertained and edified by the addresses, which were by turns earnest, humorous and practical, as well as by the music which was of a sacred character as suited the occasion. The proceeds of the day amounted to about $46.00. The following was the programme: organ solo, Mrs. W. C. Allen; hymn 282, Choir; opening address by the chairman; anthem, "O Lord how manifold are thy works"; address, Rev. Mr. Pilkey; anthem, choir; address, Rev. Mr. Rooney; Song "Consider the lilies," Mrs. W. C. Allen; address, Rev. Mr. Farncourt; hymn, the choir.

OBITUARY.
 In his home in Cartwright township on the morning of the seventh September, George Montgomery passed away peacefully at the age of eighty-seven years. The deceased was a native of the county of Cavan, Ireland, whence he emigrated with his family to Canada in the year 1841. One of the earliest settlers in Cartwright, he and his wife braved and overcame many obstacles and difficulties, that had to be encountered by those courageous men and women who entered the wilderness of Canada in the early days. For more than half a century he has been identified with the interests of the township and county. In many respects he was a remarkable man, possessed of a most wonderful memory and a great fondness for reading, he had a rich fund of information about numerous subjects, and was cheerful and entertaining in conversation. His knowledge of farming and farm animals was practical and extensive and that he was a man of taste, was sufficiently shown by his rare success in the cultivation of flowers and of fruit and ornamental trees. Although slowly declining in strength, yet, up to the beginning of his illness two weeks before his death, he retained complete possession of his mental faculties to the very last moment of his life. During his last visit a year ago with friends in Ballieboro and Millbrook his activity of mind and body was very noticeable. By those who knew him best he will be greatly missed and deeply mourned.

 "To C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:
 "Two years ago I had a severe attack of the Grip, which left me in a terribly weak and debilitated condition. Last winter I had another attack and was again very badly off, my health nearly wrecked. My appetite was all gone, I had no strength, felt tired all the time, had disagreeable roaring noises in my head, like a waterfall. I also had severe headaches and severe Sinking Pains in my stomach. I took medicines without benefit, until having heard so much about Hood's Sarsaparilla, I concluded to try it, and the result is very gratifying. All the disagreeable effects of the Grip are gone, I am free from pains and aches, and believe Hood's Sarsaparilla is surely curing my catarrh. I recommend it to all." GEO. W. Life in Equatorial Africa.
 Some years ago Captain Hore, who spent some years in the command of a mission steamer on Lake Tanganyika, visited New Zealand. He addressed the Sunday school children, and succeeded in interesting them by his curious and instructive information about Central Africa and its inhabitants. We take the following account of life in Tanganyika from the Grahamstown Journal (Cape of Good Hope):
 "Captain Hore," says the Journal, showed that the life and habits of the people of Tanganyika did not differ in essentials from those of people leading a simple existence elsewhere, and the impression made upon him, especially of the people settled to the northeast of the lake, was decidedly favorable. They had no literature, and consequently knew of no past. They had no knowledge of the outer world, and therefore could neither hear nor think about other people; but they were too busy to feel envious. When a man wanted a house, he did not consult advertisements; he had to set to work, choose a site, and build it. The day's life began early. First, the women and girls went to fetch water in vessels they themselves had made; then they took axes, which their husbands or brothers had made, and cut wood for fuel; then they ground corn, which the family had grown, and which was stored on shelves in the hut out of the way of rats, for their porridge, and so they earned their breakfast. All hands turned to at sowing time and harvest. It was an error to suppose the men did not work. They sometimes worked both night and day, and suffered great hardships as bearers in expeditions. The women were not more harshly dealt with than they were in England. One thing was to be said for these people: they were self-supporting and self-reliant. Everything they enjoyed was the fruit of their own labors and ingenuity. They had developed the fishery and navigation of the lakes, and in fishing they employed all the appliances, nets and lines that the lecturer had seen in every part of the world. Nor were they without ornamental art, for their earthenware was of graceful design, and Captain Hore had a canoe-man who composed a long poem about the white stranger, and gave it to an instrument of his own making."

Very Small Pore Holes in a Wasp.
 In any moderately large insect, say a wasp or a hornet, we can see, even with the naked eye, a series of small, spot-like marks along each side of the body. These spots, 18 or 20 generally, are the apertures through which air is admitted to the system, but formed in such a way that no extraneous matter can, by any possibility, find entrance. Sometimes a pair of horny lips close them, opened and shut at the will of the insect; again they are thickly fringed with stiff, interlacing bristles forming a filter, through which air can only pass. But the arrangement, whatever it be, is invariably so perfect in its action that it has been found impossible to inject the body of a dead insect with even so penetrating a medium as spirits of wine, though the subject was immersed in the fluid and then placed under the receiver of an air pump.—Science Poir Tous.

"Murder Will Out," Etc.
 Why, in many cases, blood stains fail to wash out is scientifically simple. In the first place, if that of a murdered person, it is seldom attempted. In the next place, blood contains a good deal of oxide of iron, which sinks deep into the fibres of wood and proves indelible to ordinary washing. Stone of a porous nature and wool not particularly hard are therefore peculiarly susceptible to blood stains because of this oxide. Unhappily for the weird adage that "blood won't out," pig blood is just as good for staining as the blood of man.—Science Poir Tous.
