The Millbrook Reporter.

W. S. GIVEN EDITOR

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1893.

THE LAST WORDS.

Before another issue of THE REPORTER is run off, the highest privilege of a citizen will have been placed before you. We have endeavoured in making such remarks as seemed to us pertinent to the good government of our village to approach matters in an unbiased disposition, with the object of improvement in our public affairs, in the exercise of not only the right but the duty of a public journal. You may not have agreed with all we have said, or someone unmindful of the office and object of a newspaper may have thought a personal attack was being made when only public doings were under criticism. Far be it from THE REPORTER to make remarks disparagingly of any citizen, but in adhering to one just purpose, "to hew to the line," the chips may have fallen across the toes of individuals it is only a reminder that a safer path should be chosen. A number of good men are in the field from whom a selection can be made entirely competent to give us wise and economic administration. Let every elector, male or female, make such a choice when they go to mark their ballot as their own brains and observations have led them to believe will give the village the best attention, men who will be impervious to all wire-pulling or self-aggrandizement and we have no misgivings as to the future of Millbrook.

THE PLEBISCITE.

Upon this great question now agitating the country the REPORTER has taken no active part pro or con up to the present and as the expression of opinion asked for by the government would be more satisfactory were it given spontaneously, without the aid on the one hand, or the deterrent on the other of the lodge, pulpit or press lash, we have not considered it our duty to devote much space to the plebiscite question. So important and far reaching are the consequences however, so fraught with issues that makes for the weal or woe of our sons and neighbors, so potent are the influences of the traffic in strong drink upon the progress of our young province, we cannot be altogether silent while the opportunity is given to pronounce upon the continuance of the manufacture, importation and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage. While it may be true that the majority of voters have either read, heard or seen sufficient to arrive at a conclusion as to how they shall vote upon this question, there may be some whose only medium of information is the REPORTER and who would be inclined to vote nay or not at all, thinking the matter of small moment or it would have been placed before our readers as worthy of some thought from us and action from them. In arriving at the conclusion that it is advisable to vote YES, on Monday next, we are aware of the cry, that individual liberty is being interfered with, that vested rights are being molested, yea and scriptural teachings are being disregarded. It is not necessary for us to combat these positions, which might easily be done, and has been time and again, and for the purpose of settling the question of how to vote, even admit these objections and we are unable to see how they can count for much in the balances that we are compelled to weigh this serious matter in. Admit if you chose that the loss to our resources will be hard to make up and that the shoe of need will pinch even tighter on some when the tax collector calls around, grant that a majority have no right to say even to a very small minority, "Thou shalt not have thy beer or wine as a beverage," acknowledge that the wine made by our Lord at Cana of Galilee was fermented or that Timothy needed a little for his stomach, does that give Tom Jones or Peter Smith the right (yes even backed with the seal of our laws) to hold out the bait of glittering poison to my son or your brother or father or husband and entice him to forget himself and his family and bring ruin and shame upon the whole household and weak brains to the offices of the state. But you may say, none are forced to drink who don't want to, which is only half true. Just watch an experienced hotel man how blandly and innocently he invites a group of young men to have something to drink, how one good turn deserves another, and how soon they drop in and buy one for themselves. Our opinion is that our province would be benefitted by your voting YES, and although you may be told that the law won't be kept and while we shall lose the revenue, drunkenness will not decrease, go out on Monday next and by your vote say you are willing to give it a trial, and whether public opinion is advanced sufficient to uphold prohibition or not, take the stamp of law from its protection and sale and put it in its place (if it has a place) amongst the druggist wares with the red label of poison upon it.

Battleboro. On Saturday morning about 2 o'clock the cry of fire aroused the villagers, and the ringing of the church bell brought in quite a number from a distance to find Heaslip's hotel in flames. The fire had made so much headway when discovered that it was as once seen that the building was doomed. It appears that John Heaslip, son of the proprietor, and a young man named Macdorey occupied a bed room over the bar, retired to bed about nine on Friday night, the bar room being closed about ten o'clock by Mr. Heaslip, about two o'clock young Heaslip and Macdorey were awakened by the smell of fire and rushing down stairs found the bar room in flames, they raised an alarm and Mr. and Mrs. Heaslip escaped in their night clothes. The family in the upper part of the house had to be let down through the windows, so quick did the fire spread. Attention was then given to saving the property near it. As a strong south west wind was blowing at the time the store and post office occupied by Mr. J. D. Perrin appeared to be in great danger, but the fire engine had been brought to play on this and adjoining buildings and thus they were saved. Mr. Heaslip's loss will be heavy as nearly everything was burnt and there was no insurance, the building was insured for $1000 in The Gore Mutual. Too much praise cannot be accorded to Mr. Sam Herriott, (who has charge of the engine) for the efficient manner in which he has placed the engine, and some tangible proof of this will no doubt be shortly presented to Mr. Herriott.
