HOW TO MANAGE A MAN.

What a Woman Should do to Retain Her Influence and Make It Felt.

A woman has great influence over a man, even if his love has somewhat waned. Any woman with a fair amount cl brains and a little "tact" can keep her husband well in "tow." Don't be to-morrow you will have to speak to too demonstrative in your manner, that is enough to tire or bore him. Keep the showing of your affection for special ly tired or downhearted. A little unexpected show of affection, or some minor attention will go a long way toward smoothing your road. Find out his likes and dislikes, and act accordingly. Don't expect a tired man to pet and humor you all the time; you have no more right to expect it of him than he of you. Most men cease many little attentions after the honeymoon is over. It is not because they are getting tired of you, and don't upbraid him. Don't mag and complain all the time, but be as cheerful as you can, especially when he comes home tired, and when trouble comes share it with as cheery a disposition as possible. If your husband or children do something you don't like find out the reason before you lose your temper; there may have been a very good reason for acting as they did. When he needs a scolding give it to him as you would a child and be done with
