CHILDREN FACTORY SLAVES.

Parents, Employers and Themselves Evade the Law.

The report just issued by the Prussian Ministry for Trades and Commerce of work done by factory inspectors during the last year in the Berlin district again deals fully with the employment of children.

Inspectors, it states, experience extreme difficulty in bringing to book the employers of children under the legal age, for not only the employers, but the children themselves and their parents or relatives use every means of evading the watchfulness of the authorities. Inspectors are also aware of the fact that a very large number of quite young children are illegally employed in home industries, especially in the manufacture of paper goods, cigarette boxes, toys and ready-made clothes. Fines have in many cases been imposed on persons who regularly employ children, even under 10 years, compelling them to work from eight to ten hours per day.

Inspectors also record the fact that complaints are increasing every year in | Wind. every branch of industry of the lack of roung people of both sexes willing to become apprentices. They prefer to seek employment in large emporiums, which are becoming such a great feature of business life, where no apprenticeship is required, and where they are paid wages from their entrance.
