CHINESE DOCTORS CONSULT.
The Richer the Patient the Larger the Number of Doctors.

A physician has just returned from China heavily laden with stories of Chinese medicine. "Medical consultations are carried to their extreme limit in China," he said. "There, when anyone becomes seriously ill, a consultation of fifteen or twenty doctors is held. The doctors fill the house with their arguments. They make as much noise as a political convention. But such a consultation as that would be considered small and futile if a great man—a mandarin, say, of the third class—were to be ill. To consult on his case at least 100 doctors would gather together."

PERSONAL POINTERS.
Interesting Gossip About Some Prominent People.
There is a singular coincidence about the two English Royal Princesses named Louise. They are both the daughters of British monarchs, they are of very fair complexion, and both married out of the blood Royal. Each also selected a Scottish peer—the Duke of Argyll and Fife—both of whom are as fair-skinned as their wives. Still further goes the coincidence, for neither of the Royal duchesses has presented her husband with a male heir.

SUMMER COMPLAINTS.

The very best medicine in the world for summer complaints, such as cholera infantum, diarrhoea and dysentery is Baby's Own Tablets. During the hot weather months no wise mother should be without a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house. These troubles come suddenly and unless promptly checked too often prove fatal. Baby's Own Tablets act almost like magic in these cases, and speedily remove all cause of danger. Mrs. Alex. Poulton, Carleton Place, Ont., says: "I have used them for cholera infantum, febrile and other troubles, and it is astonishing how quickly they relieve and cure these ailments." An occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets will keep the stomach and bowels right and prevent summer complaints. No mother need be afraid of this medicine—it is guaranteed to contain no opiate or harmful drug. It always does good—it cannot possibly do harm. Be sure that every box bears the full name Baby's Own Tablets and picture of four-leaf clover on the wrapper around the box. Anything else is a dangerous substitute. Sold by all druggists or sent by mail at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A PALPABLE HIT.
"Will, thank heaven, you've never seen me run after people who have money."
Desmond—"No, but I've seen people run after you because you didn't have money."

NOTHING EXTRAORDINARY.
"I have seen tribes," said the traveler, "who voluntarily undergo all sorts of self-inflicted lacerations." "That's nothing," answered Mr. Tutt, "I know a lot of people who insist on shaving themselves."

PROGRESS.
"People that live in glass houses needn't have any fear nowadays," said Uncle Alkan Sparks. "There are plate-glass insurance companies."

ALL ALONE.
"Ah!" said Bragg with a view to making Miss Brightly jealous, "I was alone for quite while last evening with one whom I admire very much."
"Ah!" replied Miss Brightly, "alone, were you?"

Holloway's Corn Cure destroys all kinds of corns and warts, root and branch. Who then would endure them with such a cheap and effectual remedy within reach?

"Mrs. Gabbe," observed a friend of the family, "is a very superior woman. She can converse intelligently on a thousand different topics." "Yes," sighed Mr. Gabbe, "and she does."

Externally or Internally, it is Good.
When applied externally by a little rubbing, Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil opens few pores and touches the tissue as the trouble and immediately affords relief. Administered internally, it will induce coughing and will cure affections of the respiratory organs. Try it and be convinced.

Katherine—"What do you think of marrying a man for his money?" Babbette—"Well, I've often thought of it, but I could never get hold of the man."
Higgins—"My wife says if I should die she would remain a widow until death. Of course she might change her mind, but it is sort of consoling just the same." Sprigg—"Evidently your wife thinks there is no other man in the world like you."
Higgins—"On the contrary, she's afraid there is, and that she'd get him."

ARE WE OVER-EDUCATED?
AN ARTICLE ON THE SUBJECT OF SCHOOLS.
Smattering of Scholarship Does Some People More Harm Than Good.

"Young men and women will continue to pour into London from the country districts as long as a smattering of geography and arithmetic flatters them into the delusion that they are educated, and that knowledge of the useless kind that has been drummed into them is the high road to fortune."
So writes Mr. Harold E. Gorst in his book, "The Curse of Education."

The question is: Can any good be done by educating a man or woman above his or her station in life? Certain well-known theorists argue that a girl, for example, who is born at a very humble station in life should be taught from early girlhood how to cook, sew and clean. She would then be content to become a domestic servant, and would excel as such. Instead, by our present system of education, she acquires a smattering of elocution and music, and considers herself, in consequence, fit to be a lady, and from that moment is doomed for nothing.

BLISSFUL IGNORANCE.
According to these theorists, then, it would appear that a man must tamely accept a life of drudgery because his father was a drudge. He will then be a good drudge—a contented drudge.
There is much to be said, however, for the theory that, by cramming into a boy's mind an immense amount of general knowledge, most of which is distasteful and absolutely useless to him—his natural abilities in special directions are nipped in the bud. Given two or three blunt tools, a few tacks and some glue-work, many a boy will grow quite enthusiastic, making all kinds of crude toys for himself. If trained to woodwork such a boy would probably enjoy his work, and be a boon to his employer; but the Government says he must come to the memory the exact date when Mary Queen of Scots died, where and when King John signed the Magna Charta, and the names of Henry VIII's eight wives. He is kept so busy cramming his head with needless facts that he has no time to learn how to make a table, and after a few years of this process of "education" he has no inclination either. Thus the world misses a good workman, and eventually sends him to a workhouse, a person who may be a walking history of England, but cannot find a means of earning bread and butter.

True, some of these very schools which cram boys of a hundred different temperaments with the same facts, and in the same manner, turn out real geniuses, even so; but that is in spite of the crippling system of education, not because of it.

CRIPPLED BY LESSONS.
Taking ten men who have in them at birth, the makings of really valuable citizens, possibly one weathers the withering storm of our educational mill; the other nine have their individuality, their originality, their out of the natural genius ruthlessly stamped out of them before they leave school. Their minds have become as uniform as the clothing of the police, and they and the world suffer for it.
"Nature," says Mr. Gorst, "never intended all men to be cast in the same mould. The stupidity of giving the young scholar the same mental outfit is so self-evident as scarcely to need further comment. Ever following the modern plan of stuffing minds instead of developing them, one would have thought that common sense would dictate the necessity of permitting as much variety as possible."
Mr. Gorst finds much fault with the practice of giving children elaborate toys. A little girl left to herself will get great enjoyment from imagining that a bundle of rags is a baby, and her imagination develops her mind. Give her a cleverly-made and smartly dressed doll, and she is robbed at once of the greatest scope for her imagination.

The silver trimmings on his coffin cost $12.25.

The above manner of describing a fatal occurrence; but it seems to be quite generally followed by American newspaper paragraphers nowadays. It is a delicate way of putting it, and reads much better than when one says: "He died amid the most horrible and excruciating agonies." The whole story is told and the reader's sensibilities are not shocked.

EVER TREAT YOU SO?
Coffee Acts the Jonah and Will Come Up.

A clergyman who pursues his noble calling in a country parish in Iowa, writes the following to his wife:
"My wife and I used coffee regularly for breakfast, frequently for dinner and occasionally for supper—always the very best quality—package coffee never could find a place on our table."
In the spring of 1896 my wife was taken with violent vomiting which we had great difficulty in stopping.
"It seemed to come from coffee drinking but we could not decide."
In the following July, however, she was attacked a second time by the vomiting. It was away from home filling an appointment, at the time, and on my return I found her very low; she had literally vomited herself almost to death, and it took some days to quiet the trouble and restore her stomach.
"Since then we have enjoyed the same trouble, but not so violently, and had relieved it, each time, by a resort to medicine."
"But my wife's second attack satisfied me that the use of coffee was at the bottom of our troubles, and so we stopped it forthwith and took Postum Food Coffee. The old symptoms of disease disappeared and during the 9 years that we have been using Postum instead of coffee we have never had a recurrence of the vomiting. We never weary of Postum, to which we owe our good health. It is a simple, important fact." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich.

SCHOOL SMOKING ROOM
TEACHER WHO ALLOWS OLDER BOYS PIPES.
In Return They Prevent Surreptitious Smokes Among Juniors.

The evil effects of smoking among very young boys have been so often discussed that it comes as something of a shock to learn that the principals of certain schools are advocating the adoption of smoking rooms for the pupils, hoping that thereby they will, at least, be able to control the habit.
Many Italian schools have long enjoyed the luxury of smoking rooms, where the scholars can retire during the hours and indulge in a peaceful pipe or a soothing cigar, and it is declared by the principals in these schools that recognizing the evil, the idea has also been followed in foreign countries where Italian schools have been founded, and in one of these is very popular.
The writer recently paid a visit to this juvenile smoking room and had a short conversation with a gentleman connected with the school, who stated that the "smoking saloon," as the boys called it, had been in existence nearly a year, and had answered its end, viz., the prevention of boys smoking on the sly.
MAKES THEM COMFORTABLE.
The room was comfortably and even tastefully furnished with easy chairs, couches, small tables, and bookcases, containing good literature in English and French, as well as cigars, ash trays, etc., and the room was kept at an even temperature by means of an easily adjusted radiator. Two or three boys were seated there reading, pipes in their mouths, and a look of quiet delight on their countenances.
The writer introduced to the principal, who stated that the room was much appreciated by the boys.
"For years," said this gentleman, "I had constantly been coming across boys smoking on the sly in their play groups and even behind their backs, and though I punished them if I could catch them, the boys or boys are not so numerous as the smoking room. Only those of seventeen and upwards, however, are permitted, the room being open at certain hours only. Our great object is not so much to lessen the habit of smoking among youths as to stamp out excessive cigarette smoking, which to my mind is answerable for many evil effects when indulged in by young boys."

THE DOCTOR'S FATAL SUCCESS
The fashionable doctor looked wise and smoothed his silk tail in the traditional manner, but he was not so well off as he was puffed in by a woman patient determined to foot herself into nervous collapse.
"Are you not very ill at present, Mrs. Fenlister," he said, frankly.
"Very, my dear doctor," she said, "but you are on the direct road to take an interest in my life."

OVER SEVENTEEN ONLY.
"Are you ever allowed already, my boy, to go into the smoking room, and as soon as he had reached that age and expressed a desire to avail himself of his privileges he is expected to give up the smoking, and if he does not stamp out smoking among the young, he is supposed to be doing a very bad thing, which may come under his notice, but which is not his duty, he does not shrink at this." "I believe this plan of having a smoking room for the older boys is an excellent one, and should be adopted in every school where the cigarette habit among very young boys has taken firm root. The plan has the sanction of the Children's Aid Society, who now thoroughly believe in its efficacy, and who are advocating its adoption in other schools and colleges. Perhaps you are not aware that in some girls' schools in America and in Europe the habit of cigarette smoking is almost as rampant as it is among the boys, but I confess that I am at a loss to evolve a means by which this evil can be grappled with."

PICKING UP THE PILOT.
Hardy Norseman Have Still the Old Viking Seacraft.

Some years ago I was approaching the rocky coast of Norway in a large, heavy, sea-going vessel. The captain was a man of some high degree, and the sea ran high in the inner fjords, but the water between the fjords was calm. The vessel was only just submerged called for the knowledge of a pilot, and for a pilot, accordingly, we signalled.
In about an hour's time an open boat was seen approaching, riding and dropping over the high running seas, and as we saw the boat manned by two young Norwegians and steered by the pilot we sought. The boat was not more than fifteen feet long, and her low freeboard seemed level with the water around her. But a man in such a boat could live in such a sea. The greater marvel was how the pilot could have survived as we rolled heavily to leeward and to starboard with our main yards all aback. Still more surprising was I when I saw a rope run through a block at the yardarm and run out and thrown toward the boat, which did not dare come too near us. After a few minutes the man secured the rope, and quickly making a bowline he looped at the end of it, the pilot put it around his body, and standing up in the tossing boat, prepared to jump.
The next moment we rolled away to leeward, and our yardarm was fifty feet nearer the sky. I looked again. The pilot had jumped. He was coming fast toward us, suspended high in mid-air. But before he could be swung on deck our ship had recovered herself and was now rolling toward him, and he fell with a hollow thud against her side, thence to the next moment into the boiling surf. A few seconds of suspense and then once more we rolled away

SOME ANIMAL DISLIKES.
Horses Hate Camels as Much as They Love Dogs.
"In some towns they won't let us show," said the circus man, "unless we have no camels with us. Camels are a serious drawback to shows. Horses are so much afraid of them that lots of towns won't let a camel enter their gates."
"A horse won't go near a piece of ground a camel has stood on. The very smell of a camel in the air will make a horse tremble and sweat. And this fear isn't only found occasionally in a horse here and there. It is found in every horse all over the world. Queer, isn't it? I often wonder why it is. Cattle hate dogs so in the same way, and cats hate dogs, too. Here, though, we can account for the hatred. Dogs in primitive times fed on cattle, no doubt, and even to-day, here and there, they kill and feed on kittens."
"Horses love dogs. I'm sure I don't know why. Dogs fear no animals but panas and leopards. You can take a dog up to a lion's or tiger's cage and he will show no fear; but take him up to the cage of a puma or a leopard and he will tremble and moon and sink away out of sight."
"All very puzzling, isn't it?"

THAT'S A FACT.
