More Optimism.

The mercantile companies report trade as improving. Toronto says that sorting orders there are keeping up well and fall and winter business continues brisk. In the matter of drygoods there are some authorities who go so far as to prophesy a record season's trade, although this opinion is ported to textiles, and there is some talk of later scarcity on popular lines.

Regarding Western Ontario, Bradstreets says that "general business there holds a steady tone. The movement is somewhat quieter as farmers are busy with the harvest. Collections are also a little slow. Local industries continue active preparing for fall and winter."
