Settlement Reached in Shannon v. Hogg

Defendant Pays $1,800-Did All Power to Avert Accident, but Willing to Help Family

The case of Shannon vs. Hogg was tried in Toronto on Monday and Tuesday, and resulted in a settlement. The facts of the case as elicited at the trial were as follows:

On September 12th, 1907, the defendant was travelling in his automobile on slow gear up a grade, when he turned west to the town line between Scott and Georgina, still grade. Near the top of the grade he said a buggy containing a woman and a young girl came in sight about two hundred yards to the west coming east. He told his companion to keep a look-out. The car continued to travel about three miles an hour, when the horse, which had been coming quietly along, was turned off to- friendly game with Sunderland wards the read fence. The occupants Tuesday. of the auto, thinking that the occupants of the buggy had intended turning over to the fence until they had passed, continued along slowly; but instead of stopping at the fence the horse was cramped sharply around to the right. The defendant told his companion that they must have their lines twisted and to run to their help. Mr. Welch jumped out and ran ahead of the auto. The horse continued to go around in a small circle, and in a moment or so Mr. Hogg stopped the car and jumped out also, both men running to the horse. But before they reached it the girl had jumped out. The lines were still being pulled tightly on the horse, turning him still sharply to the right, when one of the wheels struck a stone, and the buggy was turned over, bottom up, the woman falling underneath, her head striking a large rock. Mr. Hogg immediately sent for a doctor, got neighbors' assistance, and applied all the remedies possible until (he arrival of the doctor, who came within an hour of the accident. Everything was done that could be done, but the woman died within four or five hours. The woman lived in Nebraska, and was on a visit to her relatives. Mr. Hogg called her son and relatives, who were present, and told them that the accident was unavoidable, so far as he was con cerned, that he was in no way to blame, but that he felt great sympathy for all parties, and said that that although he was not liable, had been his intention to do something for the family, but he was not able to get into negotiations. Some time before the trial, Mr. Hogg's solicitors approached the other side, and while emphasizing the fact that Mr. Hogg and his companion were guilty of no negligence and were not liable, still he wished to do something for the family, and offered to last. pay $1,000 and costs, but the plaintiff would not accept less than $5,and the negotiations dropped. During the trial, an intermediary approached Mr. Hogg for a settlement when Mr. Hogg said that he would always have been glad to settle and would still, but that as part of the evidence hag gone in it must all go in and that after that he would negotiate. At the close of the evidence the plaintiff agreed to settle at $4, 000 and costs, when Mr. Hogg replied that while for the sake of a settlement he was willing to increase his former offer, he would pay no such sum as $4,000, which was out of all reason. After a great deal of negotiation, the action was settled, the defendant paying $1,800, divided as follows: $250 to each of four minor and $800 to the plaintiff Mr. Hogg stated to our reporter that he did not consider himself at all liable for an action in the matter, but that if an action had never

(Special to The Post) Rev. Mr. Cragg, of this circuit, preached here last Sunday at the usual hour. The minister made an appeal to young men to enter the ministry. Mr. Cragg pointed out satisfactorily that, year by year, there has been an increase in the number of men entering the law, medicine, teaching, etc., but there has been a decrease in the number of men entering the ministry. This should not be, because with an ever increasing Hogg gave plaintiff to understand population more ministers are required. Mr. Cragg exhorted the young people to live good lives so that they might be able to answer God's call for service if it came. CHARACTER MOULDED BY PURSUIT

By Joseph Hamilton author of "Our Own and Other Worlds," "The Spirit World," etc.

Whatever be the ambition that rules a man, that ambition will give to the man something of its own complexion and character. Our pursuits react upon us. and bring us more or less into sympathy with them. So, if a man have an earthly ambition, he becomes earthly; if he have a heavenly ambition, he becomes Heavenly. Our pursuit, whatever it is, somehow moulds us into its likeness. If a man gives himself to cunning in intrigue, his heart becomes a labyrinth of tortuous, crooked, warp. If a man's great ambition to be rich, his heart in time becomes as hard as the gold he is pursuing. If a man's ambition is to scatter seeds of kindness, he finds that "the quality of mercy is not strained; it blesses him that gives and him that

Thus our character is moulded by our pursuits. As a heavy cloud casts its dark shadow upon the earth, or as the setting sun gilds the earth with beauty, so we catch something of the color of the object to which our face is turned. If we look to the sd. earth chiefly we get the earthly look. If we lift our face to the heavens we get the heavenly look. Wherever our treasure is - in earth or in heaventhere our heart will be; and it is the heart that gives the tone to the
