CHINA'S FIGHT AGAINST OPIUM

During the last century Britain twice went to war with China in order to compel that country to legalize a traffic in opium which China had declared to be contraband. Britain's interest in this matter was the result of her position in India. Opium is largely grown in India, and the Government of that country derives a large portion of its revenue from this source. Over £20,000,000 was collected in revenue in India in the last four years from opium. "There are," says an English publication, "few pages in history more dishonoring than those which record the shameful tale of Great Britain's determination to force upon China a besotting drug in the interests of India's revenue, and against the impassioned protest of the Chinese Government and people. By smuggling and force," it is added, "we have fastened the vice upon millions of Chinese who might, and probably would, have escaped it. Having taken up a morally indefensible position and maintained it by sheer brutality and conscienceless force, we cannot evade the responsibility for much of the appalling misery which opium-smoking has inflicted. Nothing," it is further said, "has more prejudiced China against the policies, ethics and civilization of the West than the methods employed by Great Britain to replenish the Indian treasury from the degradation of the Chinese masses." In 1906, as a result of continued protests from China, Great Britain entered into an agreement with that country, under which Britain agreed to limit the export of opium from India to China, provided the Chinese Government would restrict the production of opium in China itself at the same time, the intention of the agreement being that in the course of a few years the whole traffic would be wiped out. The Chinese Government has loyally endeavored to live up to this agreement. As a means to this end, the new Government of China has disqualified opium smokers from voting. Still more drastic measures have been taken. In one Chinese city, in December, thirteen dealers were forced to march through the streets clothed in red and green coats, on the front and back of which were printed the words "Opium Criminals." In two cities the death penalty even was imposed for second convictions for the use of the drug, a woman being one of those put to death for this offence.

DUNSFORD.

(Special to The Post.) A party was given by Mr. and Mrs. John Bell on Wednesday evening last. Despite the inclement weather 93 attended. The evening was spent in dancing and games, a sumptuous repast being served at midnight, after which more dancing was indulged in and the party broke up in the small hours, everyone having a real enjoyable time. Miss I. M. Laidley and Miss Myrtle Thurston are visiting in Toronto. The members of the Presbyterian Church held their annual concert in the old church hall on Friday evening last, the programme taking the form of a Comedy Sketch entitled "what next". The piece was well staged by artists from Bobcaygeon and was as the playbills stated, one round of continual laughter. We commend the church members on their enterprise in securing this amusing play for Dunsford. It is with deepest regret we chronicle the death of Mrs. Smith ree Miss Ruby Thurston, at Moosejaw on Saturday Feb 8th and beg to send our sincere condolences to the bereaved parents and family. Mr. Knapman, special agent of the Bell Telephone Co., was in Dunsford on Thursday interviewing the Local Telephone Co Directors. Cheap rates are in progress to Lindsay on Feb 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, account Lindsay Winter Fair. Mr. and Mrs. T. Edgar and Mrs. Dr. Fallis, of Bobcaygeon, were here to attend the dramatic performance. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Thurston spent Sunday the guests of Vout Brothers, Cricklewood Heath. Mr. and Mrs. C. Laplain, Miss Maud Thurston and Messrs Milton and Morris Thurston spent Sunday the guests of Mrs. Captain Kennedy, Rosedale. Mr. W. White, of Omeme, was at Mr. Rube Bradley's on Sunday last. Miss Dobson, of Lindsay, spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Jas. A. Thurston, and returned home on Saturday last. The candy throwers were again in evidence on Friday evening last, during the concert. Cannot something be done to stop this dangerous practice. A short term in jail would probably bring the delinquents to their senses.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE

(The Manchester Guardian.) One noted two points about the way that people took the fact that Parliament was to vote on Women's Suffrage on Friday, January 25. One is that, like it or not, they did not make little of it. The whole press seemed to treat it as the public event of the week, though the Church in Wales is being further disestablished daily and Mr. Law was to make or mar a party on Friday itself. Even those papers which do not care a straw who votes, or what is voted for, bore witness to the advance of the suffrage movement by writing up Friday's decision as the week's tit-bit of public excitement. In the eyes of the cold blooded dealer in news its result has become like that of the Derby or that of the English Cup. That alone is a vast change. In any parliament before 1906 such a state of the public mind would have been inconceivable. When he compares this swift advance of the question into the first rank with, say the generations taken by Irish Home Rule to gain as much ground, a supporter of Women's Suffrage has reason, not indeed to stop and rest, but to renew his efforts with a cheerful confidence in the accumulated momentum of the suffrage cause. The other point, which one notes is the extent to which it was rumored that many members of Parliament voted for or against Women's Suffrage, not because they are actually against it, but because, if they voted as they felt on the question itself, something which they did not wish might happen to some other cause to which they wished well. Tactics, as they may be called, were about, in unusual quantities. Now, we do not hold up our hands at the wickedness of anyone who, wishing women to have votes, may still feel that he wishes something else still more, and that the one wish cannot be gratified without sacrificing the other. Such cases of conscience do occur. These difficulties of conscience, on both sides of any question, may be genuine and serious, and cannot fairly be dismissed with a sneering attribution of some low motive to those whom they perplex. But we do feel that in politics the

AN ECCENTRIC WINTER SEASON

While the present winter has been one of extraordinary mildness in older Ontario, it has been one of unusual turbulence in other quarters. Recently, while Toronto was enjoying unusually mild weather, Chicago was tied up by a raging blizzard. While, too, in Lower Ontario the buds of the chestnut have been showing signs of swelling, millions of dollars worth of damage has been caused by unprecedented frosts in California and other fruit-growing sections of Southern and South-western States. It is on the ocean, however, that the weather is turbulent. Both the Atlantic and Pacific have been strewn with wreckage and great vessels have narrowly escaped destruction. The British cruiser, on which the body of Ambassador Whitelaw Reid was re-

MEDICAL CERTIFICATE WITH LICENSE

Dr. Forbes Godfrey of West York, has signified his intention of again bringing into the Legislature his bill to surround the marriage certificate with greater safeguards and advocate a certificate of medical inspection before the marriage license may issue. When this was suggested by a deputation of ladies recently when they waited on Sir James Whitney, the Premier called it "abstract" and "crude," and judging from what has happened to most bills of this character in the Legislature, most of the members coincide with this view. Nothing daunted, Dr. Godfrey will repeat his effort.

Corundum Mills Was Destroyed

(Special to The Post.) Bancroft, Ont. Feb. 3.—The big corundum mills at Craigmont were destroyed at 4 o'clock this morning. The loss is estimated at $500,000, and one hundred and sixty men are thrown out of employment. The company paid last year in wages $120,000. BOOK YOUR SALE WITH Stewart M. WHEN GRIPPE THREATENS

La Grippe and severe colds are both threats against life. These attacks should not be ignored, they should be promptly fought. COLD BREAKERS is the best weapon with which to fight because it is sure and speedy in its effect. If this remedy is promptly taken at first indications of cold or grippe all danger and discomfort may be avoided—it cures in a few hours. In advanced stages it's the quickest cure that can be taken.
