THE LIFE AND LABOR OF ST. PATRICK ELOQUENTLY NARRATED AT ST. MARY'S

(From Saturday's Post. Ireland's patron Saint was observed in St. Mary's church last evening, when a sermon was delivered on the life and labors of Ireland's apostle, St. Patrick, by Rev. Father Fergus O'Brien, of St. Pater's Cathedral. Peterboro.

There was a large congregation present and the discourse delivered by the reverend gentleman was a splendid one. This is the first opportunity the parishoners of St. Mary's have had of hearing Rev. Father O'Brien since his ordination at Downeyville last summer, and his sermon last ev ening was characterized by splendid delivery, chaste diction and an earnestness that was most convincing and impressive.

The speaker took his text from the Book of Ecclesiastes and prefaced his remarks by asking why did the congregation assemble at the altar? Why did the heart of the Gael throb? Were they present to honor a mighty King or Statesman or to greet some athlete, flushed with victories from Olympus? Emphatically no. There were greater reasons and thoughts that had gathered them together. They were there to honor their glorious Saint who had brought the light of faith to their forefathers. \ They could review the past with a spirit of: pride and thanksgiving and go back to the hour when St. Patrick labored among the Irish people. Nations have risen and fallen, great statesmen lived and passed away. Kingdoms have conquered and in turn have been conquered, but the Irish people have preserved the faith thro' ages of persecution and oppression. In this, our fair Canada, our land promise, in fact, everywhere, the Irish heart throbbed that day and proclaimed that heritage as a gloriou one. The reverend gentleman in referring to St. Patrick, said he was Saint in every sense of the word. His was a life of penance, persever- | fied.

ance and self sacrifice, and his soul Rev. Father O'Brien then gave a beautiful word picture of the early life of the Saint, and asked if the day and hour of his advent in Ireland was not a providential one? In referring said it did not matter where he was born. The one consoling thing is that the land of his heart and spiritual adoption was Ireland. He chose the Green Isle as his own and planted there the Cross, of Christ. He had seen something more in the Irish people than the false principles of Druidism and Paganism. His preparations in the monastries of France for his glorious mission in the land of his desires was touched upon. His wonderful work among the Irish people resulted in many conversions and there were no such examples in history's pages as the zeal displayed by the Irish in accepting Christianity. Later Ireland had her years of sorrow, but notwithstanding this they preserved the faith as firmly as Brian Borue won his glorious victory Clontarf. Ireland had her bright days and days of sorrow and wronged by a nation that should because of some special Providence that the Irish were driven in exile from their share to find homes in different parts of the world? Too manifest? In every land where waves the flag of liberty, there will be found Irishmen shaping its destiny. Rev. Father O'Brien asked his hearers to always keep Ireland's history before them, practise the virtues of its glorious apostle and place their trust and glory in Christ cruci-

INSPIRED BY A DREAM

Basil Hodder tells an interesting story of how he came to write the words of "Motherland." "I am a New Zealander," he says, "and though, up to the age of twenty-four, I had never been home, I always had a great longing for the Old Country. One wild night, during a fishing excursion round the coast, three of us camped on a little rat-infested island named L'Astrolabe. We took it in turns round the telligently endeavoring to carry on camp-fire to keep watch and ward negotiations with the so-called "Old against the rats, which were daring to a degree. It was my turn, and I had potted some two dozen of them with a catapult when sleep overcame me. I awoke sdudenly, with a large rat in my coat pocket, busy over some bread and cheese I had there. I gave him a fatal squeeze and got rid of him. Then I raked the fire together and recalled a strange dream that had come to me. A voice had called from far away over the sea: 'Come home! Come home! Home! Home!' It affected me so strangely that I set to work and scribbled in my pocket-boo's the words of 'Motherland.'"

Heartbroken Bishop Addressing the Mothers' Urion of Truro, the Bishop of Truro said be was heartbroken by what he knew of the morals of Cornwall, the appallingly low standard of personal purity, the callousness with which, in many cases, lapses from cleanliness of life were regarded, not only by parents,

The negotiations are making headway. Greatest opposition is being encountered on the part of the general flock, but the clergy of the "Old Believers" are lending a willing ear to the proposais. Already several well-known members of the sectarian priesthood have officially recognized the primacy of the Pope and entered the Roman Catholic Church as so-called Uniates, preserving ancient privileges such as the Slavonic liturgy and the right of candidates for the secular priesthood to marry once before being ordained. The Vatican is receiving the clergy of the "Old Believers" and giving them the me rank as they possessed in their

A FORMER STATEMENT

A former examination had been made of these prisoners by Drs. R. W. Bruce Smith Inspector of Prisons, and Asylums, and C. K. Clarke, the latter the Superintendent of Toronto Hospital for the Insane, when verbal statements were given by Jardine and it was in confirmation of these that Dr. Bruce Smith was at the local jail here yesterday, when the confession have been her best friend. Was it was repeated, and, it is stated, was, signed by Jardine.

The statement contradicts his ev dence, given at the inquest last Oc tober, and he now admits that he en ticed the Anderson girl from the fair grounds to the vacant building, short distance away. After some alteration, in which she threatened expos jack knife and she succumbed almost lack knife, and she succumbed almost immediately.

SAYS HE WAS INSANE

This murderous attack, Jardine alleges, was due to a fit of temporary insanity, and later, realizing his deed, he fled from the building to his home, where he washed the blood from his hands and clothing. His brooding over the crime impelled him to return to the scene, where he stripped the body of its clothing by slashing away each article with a knife. Jardine's account of his method of accomplishing the work verifies conducted the post mortem. It is understood that his complete confession reveals the location of the knife with which the deed was committed.
