

UNDERDRAINAGE

It is very unsatisfactory and discouraging to be mucking with a soil which should be drained and is not.

Drainage involves a great deal of labor and expense, but on lands which will respond, or which need tilling, there is no investment on the farm which will net such interest on principal invested.

The labor problem is a difficult one to solve, but in the drainage line it is being solved to a great extent by the use of the traction ditcher.

Many ask where is the money for drainage coming from, when we have all our available capital locked up in the farm and chattels.
