JAMES GILGOLLY CAUGHT IN STORM

Minden Echo.—Mr. James Gilgolly, of Lindsay, was out here on business and got caught in Tuesday's hail storm. Although a good teamster, he was unable to keep his horse from making every effort to escape. It practically went wild, and Mr. Gilgolly pulled until the bridle parted. Almost immediately he discovered a new way of getting out of the buggy, which was going unsteadily. He did not make such rapid progress after that but succeeded in reaching Mr. J. Graham's, which was to him a shelter in time of storm. He carries many marks but we trust he may be fully recovered before this 12th of July.

Sunday's Storm Demolishes Barns

(Special to The Post)
...Omeme, May 29—On Sunday afternoon a section of land just north of Fowler's Corners was visited by a heavy windstorm of a cyclonic nature. Among other damage, the barns belonging to Mr. Kelly Mitchell were completely demolished. The storm did not touch our village but residents here was the disturbance in the north taking the form of a spiral column, of a brownish nature.

TIME TO CHASE THE MUSCA NOW

Have you seen Musca to-day? Did you kill him? If not, and his progeny are treated with the same respect, you are responsible for many thousands of his family in Lindsey this summer before September.

Musca in his primitive form is a disgusting little object; hardly able to move, he crawls about with his eleven thousand, nine hundred and ninety-nine brothers and sisters, and cousins and second cousins in about a pound of rotten stable manure, or in a little greater quantity of house refuse until he reaches the condition of a small black insect not unlike a diminutive beetle, then he develops wings, and loading himself with souvenirs, of his hitherto happy home he goes forth to see the world. A tomato outside a store attracts his attention, and after carefully wiping his feet on it and leaving a few of the souvenirs he collected in the manure heap, he finds the decaying part, and collects enough from it to carry to his next stopping place. Being fond of children he alights with all six feet on the baby's feeding bottle and has a wash and brush up in the drop of milk just oozing from the top, leaving the nipple all ready to be put in baby's mouth a few minutes later. Then he goes to see how his brothers are getting on, and brings them all back to a nice joint of meat he has noticed exposed in a butcher's shop. They have been joined on the way by some matrons of the family who find in the meat a nice place to lay a few hundred eggs, and then on they go to a sugar basin, impartially distributing their souvenirs of disease and death over the sugar, or in the milk or perhaps they investigate the jam a little too closely just before Johnny has it for supper. They are not at all shy and if Johnny fell down and cut his hand they want to know all about it and to-morrow there is a hand to be seen which is beginning to fester.

There is no greater danger to human life than Musca, the house fly, Typhoid fever and all intestinal diseases are known to be carried and propagated by it, yet what are the citizens doing to get rid of it.

Five cents worth of permanganate of potash will make sufficient disinfectant to kill all the flies around the average dwelling house. It should be diluted according to instructions, and then plentifully sprinkled everywhere where flies may be breeding. Afterwards the refuse should be destroyed either by burning it or burying it deep down in the ground. Then do not give the flies any further opportunity to place their eggs.

Much can be done by the individual in directing public opinion. If for one week every housewife when she went into store was to tell the storekeeper she would not purchase any more from him unless he cockered all his vegetables, meat and other food from the flies, there is not the shadow of a doubt but that she would not only have more satisfactory service for her self but would be the means of saving so many families, perhaps her own, from sickness, even death. The destruction of the fly is man's work and woman's work is mostly along lines of prevention. Flies cannot live without food and the food they

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" WILL CURE RHEUMATISM

McMillan's Corner, Ont., Sept. 30th, 1910.
"Your remedy, 'Fruit-a-tives' is a perfect panacea for Rheumatism. For years, I suffered distressing pain from Sciatic Rheumatism, being laid up several times a year, and not being able to work at anything. I went to different doctors who told me there was no use doing anything, it would pass away. Fortunately, about two years ago, I got 'Fruit-a-tives' and they cured me. Since then, I take them occasionally and keep free from pain. I am satisfied that 'Fruit-a-tives' cured me of Rheumatism and they will cure anyone who takes them". JOHN B. McDONALD.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest cure for Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago in the world.

most need is garbage. It matters not whether the garbage is the steaming manure heaps or basin in the corner of the sink, or the food left on plates pending cleaning up time, or the insanitary open tubs in which house refuse is kept. Garbage is the food upon which it lives and the breeding place in which it lays its eggs.

WEST'S GREAT WORK

On Buffalo Alleys Was Surprise to Bowlers at the Big Tourney—Money on Him

On Canadian night at the Buffalo bowling tourney, 14 teams from Toronto, Hamilton and Montreal were on the alleys, the grandstand back of their section was filled with friends, the Union Jack fluttering softly whenever a good score was made.

One of the big surprises of the tournament was the defeat of Gilbert in his match game with West, of London, Canada. This was for $100 a side, and there was a world of other money wagered, the Canadians backing their man to the limit. It was a 3-out-of-11 match, but only eight games were necessary, West rolling a phenomenal series of games, winding up with 267, the best score of the tourney.

LASSOED THE LAWYER

The Daring Act of a Woman Found Guilty of Murder

After sentence of twenty years' hard labor had been passed on an elderly widow for the murder of a relative, an unprecedented scene was witnessed in the Montbrison Assize Court. The woman had no sooner heard the words than she drew a lasso out of her dress and flung it with such unerring aim in the direction of a barrister acting for the family of the murdered man, that the noose encircled his neck, and as she tightened it he was pulled to the floor. Had not several of his colleagues and the gendarmes in the hall hastened to the rescue, the unfortunate man would have been strangled outright. As for the excited and too skillful widow, a tremendous struggle ensued before she could be mastered.

Mrs. Sheppard travelled in a charming costume of white serge with a black stripe, and tussan hat. A number of out of town guests attended the wedding among whom were Mr. and Mrs. Sheppard, Mrs. Sheppard, and Rev. Mr. Sheppard, Coldwater, Miss Kimpton and Miss Currie.

BAKER—FIELDING

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, in Minden, on Victoria Day, Wednesday, May 24, 1911, when Mr. Edward Burt Fielding, youngest son of Police Magistrate and Mrs. Fielding, and Miss Edna Amelia, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Baker were united in marriage by Rev. J. M. White.

In the presence of a number of invited guests the ceremony was performed at 3 p. m. in a tastefully decorated alcove of the verandah overlooking the lawn.

To the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Gainer, the bride appeared leaning on the arm of her father. She was dressed in cream silk, trimmed with lace and seed pearls, wore a beautiful tulle veil caught with a spray of orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of white carnations and ferns, tied with dew drop chiffon. The bridesmaid, Miss Belle Hogg, of 242 Markham-st., Toronto, was attired in white Swiss embroidery trimmed with insertion, while her sash, and hair bow were pale blue. She carried a bouquet of white carnations. The groom was dressed in conventional black, and was supported by his boyhood friend Mr. Wm. J. Hartle.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold bracelet set with amethyst; to the bridesmaid, a gold star and crescent brooch set with pearls; to the groomsmen, a pearl crescent tie pin.

A BAD OLD KING AND HIS DAUGHTERS

Once upon a time there was a king who had three very beautiful daughters. Their names were Hecla, Thekla, and Samantha, and they all had the most beautiful heads of hair.

Hecla was very fair, with pale-blue eyes; Hekla's hair was like burnished gold. While Samantha's eyes were very deep, deep blue, like the summer sea, and her hair was a beautiful red. But what is the use of being lovely if you are shut up all day in a thick-walled castle, with no one to look at you?

Once a week the King used to play a little game which pleased his wicked Majesty mightily. He fetched the Princesses, made them put on close white caps which covered up everything but their eyes, and then led them to a window for all the world to see.

Trumpets were blown, and a proclamation made that any Royal Prince who wanted to marry one of the beautiful Princesses was to look at them in the window and then come and see the old King.

Hundreds of young men—handsome and ugly, clever and dull, grave and gay—came from far and near, for the sake of the beautiful maidens had spread to all parts of the land.

When they saw the three pairs of eyes under the white caps they fell madly in love with Samantha, whose eyes were a deep, deep blue, like the summer sea, and then they hastened to see the old King.

"Are you quite sure you have made up your mind which Princess you want?" he asked.

"Quite sure. The third on the right as she sat at the window."

"Then the old King said: "Very well; only before you shall her, to make quite sure, you shall choose her again. And remember, my dears," he added, with a wicked grin, "if you choose wrong you shall never go back to your mothers."

So he led the aspiring Princes into another room, where the Princesses sat in a row with their backs turned, and only their wonderful hair to be seen. And it sometimes happened that the lovers pointed to Hecla and cried:

"Those deep blue eyes could only go with hair like a watery sunset."

Or sometimes they said: "Blue eyes like the summer sea could only belong to the maiden with hair like burnished gold."

But no one thought that red-haired Samantha was the one he really wanted.

Then the old King would laugh a scornful laugh and press a little button, and the poor young Prince dropped down through a trap-door into the dungeon below, and never went back to his mother.

But one day there came a Prince to woo the beautiful maidens, and he had an artistic eye.

He looked at them in a row by the window in their little white caps, and he squinted up his artistic eye, and he said to himself:

"She ought to have red hair, that maiden with eyes like the summer seas."

So he went to the bad old King, and braved the danger of the dungeon, and when he came into the presence of the long-haired maidens, he marched straight up to Samantha and cried:

"Only red hair like this could go with deep-blue eyes."

Samantha rose and turned to him, and he was so dazzled by her wondrous beauty that he could not speak.

The old King was very angry because his favorite game was taken from him, now that a Prince had chosen rightly. He stamped with his foot, and behold! the trap-door opened and in he fell, and was never seen any more.

Then Samantha and the Prince were married, and lived happily ever after, and red hair became the fashion in that part of the world.

WILL CONTROL ALL COMPANIES

Important Extension of the Power Vested in the Hydro-Electric Commission

The request of Sir Henry Pellatt that the Mr. Naught Hydro-Electric bill be withdrawn will not be granted. There will be some modifications however in the first draft. The jurisdiction of the Commission will cover all the power and electric light companies in the Province. The authority given to the Commission last session to supervise the plant, equipment and operation of all companies will thus be extended to the erection of poles, hanging of wires, and laying of conduits. This will make the Commission an electric commission just as the Dominion Railway Commission is a railway commission. Just as the Railway Commission adjudicates all disputes between railways and between railways and their customers, the Hydro-Electric Commission will be the court to which all disputes between electric companies will be referred, and under the direction of which they will carry on their business. In explaining the changes he had made in the bill, Mr. McNaught said that the Commission had not been guided in this matter by the experience in Toronto. It was first led to consider the question of regulating municipal and private plants by the case in Gravenhurst, where a boy was injured by defective municipal equipment, and the town had to pay very heavy damages. The clause had been inserted in the bill, Mr. McNaught said, and these clauses were added this year in order to make the Commission's power definite. While in such matters the orders of the board are final, the question of damages will be settled by another board. It was objected that to a certain extent the Commission was a partner in municipal power schemes, and therefore should not decide what the municipalities or the companies were to pay under its orders. Under the bill in its new form the question of damages will be settled by a board of arbitration under the Municipal Act. For instance, if the Commission orders that the wires of a municipal distribution plant are to be strung on an existing company's poles, that order will be final. But the company will be allowed to take to a board of arbitration the question of how much the municipality should pay for that privilege.

BURGLARS' MESSAGES

Scotland Yard Detectives Never Solved a Certain One

It is a fact not generally known that professional "crooks" frequently use cyphers of their own invention in order to communicate with their confederates. Quite a number of these are preserved in the "Black Museum" at Scotland Yard, and all of them have been deciphered—save one.

This solitary exception, which has baffled all the experts, was found on a burglar named Macdonald, who was sentenced some time back at the Old Bailey to twenty years' penal servitude for the attempted murder of Detective-Inspector Hooper and other officers by shooting at them with a revolver while he was being taken in a four-wheeled cab to Euston Station in custody.

The Foreign Office, the Secret Service, and the Home Office experts, have all in turn tried their hands at it, but without success. Yet it is known to be a genuine cryptogram, and not a mere meaningless jumble of signs and letters.

Its construction must be very elaborate, for many of those that have been deciphered are of exceedingly intricate construction. One took six weeks to unravel. It was worth the trouble, however, for it revealed the clue to the hiding-place of $18,000 worth of stolen jewellery.
