MONEY AFFAIRS OF YOUR CHILD

The Adviseability of Giving Them a Definite Allowance and Cultivating Thrift

One day last summer a mother took her children to a popular picnic park. After the fashion of children, they came to her at frequent intervals throughout the day with requests for money for pony rides, merry-go-round trips, ice-cream, and all the things that children think essential to their pleasure on such occasions. When the mother counted up at night, she was astonished to find how much money had been spent.

"I think," she said to her husband, "that our present method with the children will make spendthrifts of them. They have no idea of the value of money."

When next they were going to the park, the mother gave to each child a sum of money in his own pocketbook. She explained that this money was for the picnic, and when it was spent they could not have more. They considered the spending of money carefully, often consulting with their mother. They weighed different things, and decided which they would rather have, and when the money was gone, there was no coaxing or whining.

The mother decided, too, that each child should have a weekly allowance, instead of coming to her with their little wants. The children were five and six years old, and they were given five cents a week each. The first week the money was all spent the first afternoon. They bought some marbles, and the rest went for candy. On Sunday they were sadly distressed because they had no coppers for Sunday school. Mother did not give any, and they never forgot again. In a very short time they wanted things that cost more than five cents, and so they learned to deny themselves and save for a definite object. After that, at mother's suggestion, they put a nickel in the bank each week—that bank that was to take them through college by and by. Of course they made many mistakes, but the parents argued that it was better to make mistakes with the coppers than with the dollars after awhile. When the child had a first lesson that they had money, they were taken from their childish expenditures, but after a few disappointments in getting things that they had planned, they learned to resist this temptation.

By the suggestion that can always be given in stories, the mother gradually trained them to buy less candy and satisfy their appetites with some harmless indulgence. When the children were a year older, their allowance was increased.

In one of the recent magazines, a writer argued against giving children an allowance, saying that it gave them the feeling that the world owed them a living. In my experience I would draw an inference exactly opposite. The child who is accustomed to receive whatever sum he asks for from his parents would be very likely to get this irresponsible feeling, but one who has a definite sum to depend upon, and knows that he must use it wisely, develops a sense of thrift. The child in a well-conducted home always has some little duties, and while he should regard them as a labor of love and not feel that he is specifically paid for them, yet they make him, to the extent of his ability, a part of the working household, and thus give him a share of its savings.

One mother wisely phrased it, "This is your salary, be as you are our dear little boy."—Zella Margaret Walters.

OUR LIGHT RATES AND SEYMOUR CO'S

A representative of the Central Ontario Power Co., was in town Thursday quoting the rates which that Company were prepared to give local power users should it secure a franchise.

He called on a great many citizens and obtained the rates they were paying at present for house lighting. For certain reasons some of the citizens did not wish their names published, but below are given a number of comparisons which should be of interest:

Dr. Blanchard's bill for Nov 29th to Dec. 29th was $3.60 net. He consumed 38.3 k.w. He has nine rooms in his house, and had been using Seymour current, he would pay 10c. per room or 90c. plus 3c per k.w. for current used during said month. He used 38.3 and 3 times that is $1.15, which added to 90c would give him a total of $2.05, which would be his net bill with the Seymour Power Co. against his net bill with the other company of $3.60, a saving of $1.55 on one

MONSTER BEDS.

Though the beds of the royal personages of England were elaborately carved and hung with rich curtains even so late as the Tudor period, it is recorded that King Henry VIII's bed contained only straw beneath all its finery. A curious order exists as to precautions to be taken against the possibility of intended mischief to the royal person in the making of the bed, for the usher was to search the straw through with a dagger "that there be none untruth therein and to tumble over on the down bed for the better search thereof." The bed of Henry VIII was nearly eleven feet square, and of even more generous dimensions is the great bed to which Shakespeare refers in a well-known passage in "A Twelfth Night," which was twelve feet square. This "great bed of Wars" has been a marvel for centuries.

FORMER LINDSAY RESIDENT GETS A PENITENTIARY TERM FOR COUNTERFEITING

The Orillia Packet says:—About the middle of last week Mr. John Scott notified Chief Reid that a counterfeit five-dollar note, of the Bank of Montreal had been offered at the wicket of the Dominion Bank. Later, another of the same was taken to the Merchants Bank for deposit. On Monday afternoon a young man came to the police to complain that the circus people were putting out counterfeit money, he having taken one of the same $5 bills in change at the ticket wagon. Constable Reid went to the grounds and kept a sharp look-out, but there was no developments until evening, when the ticket seller recognized a young man named Hudson, who came back with another five as the youth who had passed the counterfeit on him earlier in the day. Hudson was arrested and he told the Chief that he had got the money from a chum named Watson, a young fellow about his own age, who had given him the bills to buy tickets with, and return him the change. On the way to the police station they met young Watson, who also was arrested. On the way he dropped one of the bogus bills on the sidewalk and another was found in his pocket. Watson's father's house was next visited under a search warrant, and the police found two more of the $5. bills on Watson, senior's person. He was then arrested and lodged in the lock-up with the others. The three persons were brought before the magistrate on Tuesday morning, and remanded till one o'clock yesterday, to await the coming of county Crown Attorney Cotter.

Before the Police Magistrate yesterday the two younger prisoners pleaded not guilty, and elected to be tried summarily. County Crown Attorney, Cotter pointed out that the offence alleged implied guilty knowledge and he was not able to offer satisfactory evidence that the boys were aware that the bills were counterfeit. The charges against them were therefore dismissed. Watson pleaded guilty and was sentenced to two years and a half in the penitentiary at Kingston. It was urged in his behalf that he had a delicate wife and son, and that inquiries at Lindsay and Uxbridge showed that his previous record was good. Before the opening of the court Watson told the County Attorney a story of a mysterious message from a stranger, and consequent meeting with a masked man, who gave him $50 in bogus money, and was subseguent to get $20. for it. Magistrate Clarke frankly told the prisoner that he did not believe a word of this story, and said that it was evident that the prisoner was shielding somebody. At least thirty dollars was got out in Orillia and thirty dollars in Bracebridge. The bank authorities say that last March about $5,000 of these same counterfeits was in circulation. Watson will be taken to Barrie today and given into the hands of Sheriff Harvey, who will see to his removal to Kingston.

The Watsons came to Orillia, from Uxbridge about two months ago, the father taking employment in Miller's tannery. They had been in Uxbridge about two years and before that had resided for six years at Lindsay, Watson, senior, gives his age as forty, the son is about sixteen and young Hudson is seventeen.
