DRUNK'S DEMISE A MYSTERY

TORONTO, June 24.—From the inspector, sergeants and other police officers in No. 6 Division, Coroner J. W. Russell's jury were last night unable to learn how Charles Marshall's skull became fractured, and an open verdict was returned.

Marshall, who at one time was a clerk in the drug department at Eaton's, and was a Mason of high degree, died in the General Hospital on June 15, after being in the jail for a week, to where he was remanded from the police court as a "drunk."

All the police officials, including the constable who made the arrest, stated they had seen 10 marks on his head. On the other hand every official who saw the prisoner at the jail had noticed a black and blue mark behind the left ear. The post-mortem examination revealed that the skull was fractured immediately below this discoloration, and that three hemorrhages and softening of the brain resulted upon this injury had caused death.

In the course of the investigation T. H. Wilson, jail bookkeeper, stated that Constable Chapman, the driver of the patrol wagon which transported Marshall to the jail, had stated he had seen the injury behind the man's ear as he was entering the jail. A jurymen suggested that Chapman should be summoned, but Inspector Verney rose from his seat and advised that Chapman could not throw any new light upon the case, as he had not been inside the van and would not know if anything happened inside on the journey from the City Hall to the jail.

PRES. WILSON'S PERSONAL PLEA

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Bearing a personal plea for immediate action by Congress to revise the banking and currency laws, that business may be aided in meeting tariff revision, President Wilson for the second time went to the House of Representatives yesterday and personally read his address on the subject to both Houses of Congress assembled in joint session. He appealed to every member of the House and Senate to lay aside personal considerations and sacrifice comfort, and even health, if necessary, to secure at once a revision and reform of the nation's banking system. Only in that way, he declared, could the country secure the benefits of the tariff revision soon to be completed.

"It is perfectly clear that it is our duty to supply the new banking and currency system the country needs, and that it will immediately need it more than ever," said President Wilson. "Shall we hasten to change our tariff laws, and then be lagging about making it possible and easy for the country to take advantage of the change? There can be only one answer to that question. We must act now, at whatever sacrifice to ourselves."

The vigor and strength of his short message held the rigid attention of his large audience throughout its delivery. The President gave no direct endorsement to the Glass currency bill, which is to form the basis for the Democratic revision of the banking laws, but in indirect language made it known that it had been prepared with his counsel and approval.

The minority attitude toward the President's currency plans was reflected in a statement made by Representative Mann of Illinois as Republican leader of the House.

"The President's message is a fine example of classic English," said the statement, "but there is nothing more to be considered as a threat that patronage will be withheld until a banking and currency bill is passed. I wish to co-operate with those in favor of passing a reasonable banking and currency bill, but the President evidently intends to treat the subject as one purely partisan, and he did not take the trouble even to discuss or analyze the principles involved in banking and currency legislation."

SOME NEW CURES FOR INSOMNIA

The following methods of courting the sleep that will not come have been recommended to sufferers from insomnia:

1. Do not tire yourself in the evening, but idle away the time, allowing yourself to get comfortably bored until bedtime. The more your brain is dulled the better night you will have.
2. Open your window wide, lie with your head as low as possible, and you will sleep like a post.
3. Knock off your black coffee, and take no meat in the evening.
4. Count an imaginary number of sheep jumping over a gate.
5. Try reading yourself to sleep, but do not read anything lively or interesting.
6. Count very slowly from one upward. It is very rare that one gets up to 200 without going off to sleep.
7. Place a wet cloth around your head at night, covered with a piece of oil skin, and tied on with a bandage; sleep should then come within a few minutes.

LONGEST PERIOD OF DAY LIGHT

At this time of the year the sun is passing from the south towards the north and on Saturday it had reached its farthest north position, from which point summer is said to begin and last until the sun slowly moves a little each day southward until it is exactly over the equator on the 23rd of September, on which day the summer will end and autumn begin. From that time on the sun will continue to move south until the 22nd of December, when it will be slightly more than 23 1/2 degrees south of the equator, when autumn will end and winter begin, as the sun moves to the north again to usher in the spring. The seasons ever thus being governed by the position of the sun, is it any wonder that primitive people who were observing the movements of the "heavenly host," considered them to be alive, should pay especial deference to the sun, and single him out from the others and worship him as the "Lord of Light and Life."

Today the planets Neptune and Mercury were within two degrees of each other in the early morning sky, nearly two hours ahead of the sun. Venus will be at her farthest point in her orbit from the sun.

On Thursday, the 26th, the moon will be in the last quarter and will have just passed the point of her farthest distance from the earth during the month.

At this time Jupiter is the only planet easily seen in the southern evening sky; rising quite late it is not very well placed for observing. By the middle of next month Jupiter will appear well up in the south at 10 o'clock a. m.

FATALLY BURNED AT NEWCASTLE

Cobourg, June 23.—Lizzie Atherton, a twelve-year old Marchmont Home girl, met death under distressing circumstances at Newcastle at the home of Mrs. Fisher, by whom she was employed. It appears that Mrs. Fisher went out to the store leaving the young girl washing the dishes. The latter threw papers on the fire, either in play or with the idea of brightening it up. Her clothing caught fire from the papers flaming up and neighbors, hearing her scream found her enveloped in flames. A physician was summoned to attend her, but she was severely burned and died three hours later.
