NEPHEW OF MR. A. ROBERTSON HONORED IN SCOTLAND ON COMING OF AGE

A recent issue of the Carlisle and Lanark (England) Gazette, contains a lengthy account of an interesting function in connection with the coming of age of Robert Robertson-Shersby-Harvie, of Brownlee, a nephew of Mr. A. Robertson, of Lindsay.
The affair was held at Brownlee House, and the large company present represented three districts. The proceedings took the form of a garden party, and a toast list was enthusiastically carried out, which was interspersed with music, and at the close dancing was indulged in.
Mr. Robert Robertson-Shersby-Harvie is the new laird of the Brownlee House and estate. He was educated at Bedford Grammar school, and at the Caius College, Cambridge, where he is qualifying for the English bar. His family has a most notable history, as he had been called upon in the threshhold of manhood to take up a most important estate, in which his predecessors have, in three generations, spanned 150 years of possession with blameless lives.
Councillor D. Buchan, a warm friend of the family, in proposing the health of Robert Robertson-Shersby-Harvie, gave a most interesting history of the estate of Brownlee and its various proprietors.
It was a remarkable thing that during the long period from 1760 to 1911 not one of these lairds of Brownlee had any family. The first, the entailor was married, but had no family, and there never had been an heir since.
There was a slight touch of romance about the marriage of Elizabeth Harvie, another daughter of the Rev John Harvie, of Innerwick. A young doctor named Thomas Robertson, (great grandfather of Mr. A. Robertson, of Lindsay), had at the precocious age of 19, received an appointment as naval surgeon, and before he went away to take up his duties he went to see the Parish Minister at Innerwick. In a corner of the room an infant was lying, in a cradle, and the young man rocked it to sleep. Some teasing followed, and the Minister's wife jocularly remarked that he might marry the child. Nineteen years later the remark came true, and he married the child, whom, as an infant he had rocked in the cradle. This Thomas Robertson saw much service during the Napoleonic War; he practically founded the Hospital ship as a feature of Naval organization. He died at the age of 77 and his eldest son was Admiral Robert Robinson, Mr.
Robertson's (Lindsay) grandfather.
This man devoted his life to the navy and from the time of the first introduction of steam into the navy, he may be said to have been identified with steam; pioneering work. He was lieutenant of the Rattler, the first steam war vessel, and saw 47 years' service in the navy. He was succeeded by his son, Thomas Robertson, brother-in-law of Mr. Robertson, Lindsay.
The present laird of Brownlee has also recently succeeded to an estate near Woolwich.
