REBEL WHO CAME BACK

DR. WOLFRED NELSON HAD MANY FINE QUALITIES.

Interesting Ceremony at Sorel Recently of the Re-interment of the Body of Papineau's Associate Recalls the Life of a Well-Loved Man-Came Back From Exile to Serve a United Dominion.

In the old and interesting town of Sorel there recently took place the re-interment of the remains of a man, who, in his time, played a conspicuous and somewhat dramatic part in the affairs of one of the most stirring periods of our history, whose name was once a household word, and whose memory is still held dear by thousands and respected by all who know the story of his eventful life. That man was Doctor Wolfred Nelson, one of the leaders of the insurrection in Lower Canada in the autumn of 1837. His associates and followers in what speedily proved to be a forlorn hope and a lost cause, called him a patriot; those who represented constitutional authority called him a rebel. and such he was in the eyes of the law; but whether patriot or rebel, both friends and foes had to admit that he played his part in that unfortunate venture like a man, true to the cause for which he stood, true to the men whose co-operation he had enlisted, and brave enough to share danger with those whom he and other leaders had induced to leave their peaceful farms, and stake life and fortune upon rebellion by force of arms.

For many years the remains of this remarkable man had reposed in the old cemetery of the Anglican Church at Sorel. A new cemetery was recently established, and a few days ago relatives, one or two grey-haired contemporaries, and a goodly company of citizens of the present generation assembled to pay their respect to the memory of the dead, and to bear his remains to a new and more suitable resting place. The interest taken in the event showed how large and permanent is the place assigned to Doctor Wolfred Nelson in the history of the old Province of Lower Canada.

Wolfred Nelson, was born in Montreal on July 10, 1792, the year of the first Parliamentary election in Lower Canada. At the age of fourteen he was apprenticed to Dr. Carter, of the army Canada. At the age of fourteen he was medical staff at Sorel, known as Fort William Henry, and there he was trained for the medical profession. In January, 1811, his apprenticeship ended, and having passed his licensing examination at Montreal, he began the practice of his profession at the village of St. Denis, on the east bank of the Richelieu, and about twentylives for the patriot cause. On November 22 Col. Gore, with 250 men and a 12-pound howitzer, proceeded from Montreal to Sorel by boat, with orders to advance to St. Denis, and disperse the insurgents. That night the rain fell heavily, and the roads were almost knee-deep with mud. Over these roads Gore marched his weary men; appearing perore st. Denis at about nine o'clock in the Nelson had made preparations to resist attack. A barricade was thrown across the road and men were stationed in the stone distillery and in a stone house nearby, which formed the key of the rebel position.
