

QUAKERS PROTEST AGAINST WAR

The Post is in receipt of the following from a member of the Society of Friends residing in Mariposa with a request that it be published.

A protest against all Wars and Fightings and the spirit thereof, from the Religious Society of Friends (called Quakers), addressed to the people of Canada:—

Inasmuch as many have undertaken to stir up the minds of the people, of this, our beloved country, in the interests of war, we, the above mentioned Society being a peace-loving people, do feel to send this forth amongst you.

"Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. (Rom. 12: 19.)"

Christ said, in His Sermon on the Mount, "Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth; But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also." How can we actively resist evil, and yet have a clear conscience before Him who has given these charges? And if such resistance be wrong for individuals, surely it must be just as sinful for nations.

We cannot find, in all of Christ's teachings, any justification of war or the spirit thereof; for this spirit which prompts us to harm our fellow-man is that of the Evil One. Therefore whosoever is actuated thereby opposes Christ's teaching.

While we can rejoice over the little leaves that are working among the nations of the earth, it would be "Woe" unto us to cry "Peace, peace" when there is no peace; and there never can be, so long as armaments are being built for offense or defence.

We, as followers of Him who was proclaimed the "Prince of Peace," believe that before God all men are equal, and that He is no respecter of persons; therefore, since He, our Supreme King and Law-giver, forbade the use of the sword, how can we draw it for any lesser potentate?

The Church of Christ is unfaithful to her trust if she confront not the world with the teaching of her Lord.

It is to be lamented that so many who profess to be the followers of "his 'Prince of Peace'" do engage in the promotion of this great evil. Apart from the horrors of war, which are well known, there are evils caused by war, in the time of peace.

By various crafty and deceitful means we believe many innocent ones are led to have a hand in that which they do abhor. Under a pretence of physical and moral training, the art of warfare is taught to those in the tender years of childhood and youth. There is nothing good in this which cannot be taught our children in our educational institutions without the aid of anything pertaining to war. The Society of Friends is utterly opposed to military training, in any respect whatever, in any of the schools of our country. Our children can receive physical and moral training on a peaceful principle to better advantage than otherwise; for peace promotes love, humility, submission and condensation; whilst war promotes hatred, pride, and such subordination only as is brought about through fear, not love.

We do earnestly desire your serious consideration of these things, that, ere it is too late, we might yet be released from the burdensome evils now casting their shadow upon our beloved country.

Given forth at the 47th Annual Gathering of the Society of Friends, held at Pickering, Ontario, in the Sixth Month of the year 1913.

Signed by direction and on behalf of Canada Yearly Meeting of Friends, Mordecai F. Starr, Marianne Richardson, Clerks.

CIVIC SPIRIT CIVIC UNITY

The following, which is taken from this week's Bobcaygeon Independent, is brimful of logic and good, sound, common sense:—

Several attempts at various times have been made in Bobcaygeon to induce a spirit of civic pride and mutual interest in the welfare of the village and community. It cannot be said that the efforts amounted to anything more than the mildest kind of spasms. Lindsay citizens are trying to work a Civic Improvement Association, and have made a good start, though they are meeting with the inevitable opposition. It is so extremely difficult to move people who are once set in a rut. New places such as the need growths in the West, can accomplish things with ease. They have no ruts, everyone is enthusiastic for advancement, and ready to adopt without hesitation, or objection, anything that appeals to reason. Old places that have been running for years in the same ruts, are not to be moved with anything short of an earthquake or a railway contractor. People who have been in a rut for thirty or more years resent being pried out of the rut. Their vision is confined to the rut, and anything outside and beyond the old familiar and loved rut, looks to them like a nightmare dragon, and they shrink all the closer to the rut. Lindsay has a main street that would be suitable for structures of twenty or thirty stories high, but with buildings two and three stories, it looks like a prairie. Into that prairie, since its original condition as a cedar swamp, the taxes of the ratepayers have poured like soap-suds down a sewer. One of the proposals of the Association is something of an ornamental character at an intersection of the prairie, and instantly a flood of objections are let loose. For forty years not a proposal has been made to beautify the town, but the moment one is offered, there are objections by the hundred. The same in Bobcaygeon. For fifty years the village has run in the same rut, and it is like sacrilege to suggest getting out of it. No matter what may be suggested, there are always objections. A lift from the rut is hotly resented. If a sidewalk has to be relaid, it must go down in the same old place. If in turning a corner vehicles are clipping the edge of a man's house, the road must not be moved. If anything must be moved, it is the house that must go. What has been, must be. It was good enough fifty years ago, it should be good enough today, and that is all there is to it. It is a long-slow process to get a village or town out of the rut, and a mighty discouraging one. It has to be educative, the people must first be talked into the advantages of a community working together for the general good, and out of the monstrous ideas that prevail regarding the possibilities of councils. People elect a few councillors once a year, and imagine they have done their whole civic duty. Some of the people imagine the councillors can accomplish everything conceivable by the human mind, and the others look upon the council as a barrel of money, from which they have a right to help themselves provided they can put up an excuse sufficient to evade arrest for robbery. The first work must be educative, and two or three active minds on each street can work wonders among the neighbors. There are hundreds of things that each can do individually, and others that the street can do collectively without expense, or interference with regular occupation. Each street could be entirely changed in appearance by the residents themselves, and in one season a village or town completely transformed. All that is needed is the civic spirit and that is to be obtained by a few on each street talking it up, and getting together occasionally for mutual encouragement and unity of purpose. The civic spirit does not knock, it does not grasp for public money. It gives, and does things, it works not merely for the individual property or the owners street, but everything for the advantage of the community. The civic spirit is the communal spirit, two or three hundred householders form a community or village, the interests of one being bound in the interests of the others. When people think civily, then they will work civily, and not before.

LOBBYIST EXPOSES ANTI-LABOR

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Martin M. Mulhall, professional field agent, strike breaker, lobbyist and political worker for the National Association of Manufacturers, yesterday continued his remarkable story before the Senate investigation committee. Mulhall was on the stand for six hours. In that time nearly six hundred letters, telegrams and scraps of memoranda were identified by him, with hardly more than a glance. He remembered apparently the first names of members of Congress, of lesser politicians, of labor leaders and underlings, and of all the men he had worked with through a year of most active campaigning in many parts of the country. His performance seemed so remarkable to lawyers present that they sat all through a long day intently watching the witness and listening closely to the letters and every word that the witness uttered in the brief cross-examination that accompanied some of them.

The Senate committee devoted yesterday largely to reading into the record the tale of Mulhall's political activities. There was an occasional reference to strikes in which the lobbyist had figured and allusion now and then to the inside workings of labor unions, but for the most part it was a story of politics as Mulhall played the game. Mulhall's correspondence told of efforts to re-elect former Congressman Littlefield of Maine, and defeat the present representative from that district, Daniel J. McGillicuddy. Littlefield was to be supported by the National Association of Manufacturers, because of his stand against labor legislation. Mulhall said on cross-examination that he had been told that $60,000 was spent in that campaign. Littlefield was beaten.
