

Splendid Sample of Fat Cattle

Mr W. J. Moore Cattle Buyer Brought Them to Town Tuesday

Mr. W. J. Moore, cattle buyer, brought into town yesterday from his farm one of the finest bunches of fat cattle that has been seen on the local market this season.

The cattle arrived in splendid condition as they were handled carefully en route. Our reporter in conversation with Mr. Moore, was told that it added at least $1.00 to each animal when they were delivered in good condition. In coming into town Mr. Moore had several bad places to pass, and it was not necessary to dog or abuse them to get them along as Mr. Moore took two of the animals ahead and the rest followed along like dogs, without crowding or over heating. The buyers of cattle would be glad if the farmers would take more care in handling their stock for delivery, and they could take some valuable lessons from Mr. Moore.

Presentation at S.S. No 1 Mara

Miss Nettie White, who has been for the past two years a very successful teacher in Montreal school has resigned her position as teacher of that school. Miss White took a great interest in her pupils and gave entire satisfaction in the section.

One evening during the holidays her many friends and pupils gathered at her home to present her with a beautiful combination writing desk and bookcase in quarter cut oak, its bevel plate mirror on top setting off the massive carvings and trimmings. The following address read by Miss Maggie Cowie accompanied the presentation, after which Miss Annie McRae, unlocking the desk, displayed the contents, a handsome box of note paper and an inkstand in cut glass.

The address read was as follows: Gamebridge, June 30th.

Miss Nettie White.—

Dear Teacher.—On behalf of the pupils of S. S. No. 1, Mara, we wish to express to you the regret we all feel at your decision to vacate the position which, as our teacher, you have so ably filled for some time, past. We acknowledge that at times we have given you considerable work and worry, through neglect and carelessness and while we regret having done so, we thank you for your patience and kindness which you have always shown towards us as such times, and sincerely trust that you will not think us ungrateful for the earnestness with which you have always labored to forward us in our studies.

And now as we are about to part for some time at least as teacher and pupils, we wish to you a long and happy life and success in whatever you may undertake, and we ask you to accept this present as a slight token of our regard, trusting that in the future it may serve as a pleasant reminder of the happy and profitable hours we spent together in the school room.

While we say "Good-Bye" we would have you remember that among your foremost friends you may remember the pupils of Montreal school.

Signed on behalf of the school,

MAGGIE COWIE.

ANNIE McRAE.

Miss White made a feeling reply to the address, after which a tasty repast was served and the hour to part came all too soon.

"No sleep that night, where youth and pleasure meet,
To chase the glowing hours with lively feet."

School Children at the Fair

School children's exhibits will be a feature of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, this year. During the past two years the schools of Toronto have had this department almost to themselves, but it is now proposed to extend it to the other cities and towns in Ontario. The Education Department is taking an active interest in the matter, and the exhibit at this year's exhibition, August 28th, to September 13, promises to be the greatest in that class of work ever seen anywhere. Ontario must lead in educational work.

SHOCKING TRAGEDY IN PETERBORO COUNTY

After Period of Illness, Thomas Willoughby of Peterboro County Kills Little Girl and Lays Body Out on Parlor Couch for Burial

Norwood, Aug. 18.—After slaying his six-year-old daughter, bathing her body, arraying her in her Sunday clothes, and laying her on a couch in the parlor, Thomas Willoughby, a prominent farmer living about two miles from here, took his own life yesterday afternoon. Willoughby had been unwell for some time, and recently, it is said, had shown signs of despondency.

The tragedy was discovered when the wife of a neighboring farmer entered the Willoughby home on an errand. Mrs. Willoughby was away shopping in Norwood with her nine-months-old baby. The neighbors were startled by low cries from the parlor and, hurrying into the room, found the body of Sarah stretched on the sofa and Willoughby lying beside her. He was still alive and attempted to speak, but in a panic the woman rushed for some one to assist her, and when, a few minutes later, she returned with help, Willoughby was dead on the floor.

There was one other member of the family in the house when they returned, little Harry Willoughby, aged 6, but he could tell nothing. He had gone into the house a short time before, but had found no one there, he said.

A search revealed a double-barrelled shotgun, with one barrel recently used, in the woodshed, and there were also blood stains and grains of shot on the floor. It was here apparently that the murder had been committed. The girl had been shot in the breast.

The fact that the body of the girl was arrayed in her best clothes was explained by the presence in a heap in one corner of the room of the garments which she usually wore. A basin of water nearby showed that the demented man had washed the body before dressing it in the new clothes.

Willoughby was a man of about 35 years of age, and universally respected throughout the countryside. Quite recently his health began to fail him.

While the theory of murder while insane is readily accepted, it is also possible that the shooting may have been accidental and that, in his anguish, Willoughby then ended his own life.

Coroner Grey of Peterboro, who went at once to the scene of the tragedy and made a hurried examination of Willoughby's body, declares that he found no outward trace of poison. If, at the post mortem, this proves to be the case, the only theory of the man's death is that he died of the shock and remorse following upon a realization of his deed. It is thought more probable, however, that Willoughby died from the effects of a poison not readily detected.

An inquest has been ordered for today.
