NOVEL MARRIAGES.

English Couples Take Special Care to Be Unique.

Americans have not shown much desire for uniqueness as regard to equipages in which they ride to get married. Most everybody who has a thought of getting married never thinks of departing from the usual cab or taxi and as a result all weddings in this country are noted for a certain sameness. The people of "Merry England" have different tastes in the matter and when it comes to getting married they spend a great deal of time devising some novel way in which to be carried to the church. Speaking on the subject an English writer says: A fire engine makes a very smart turnout at a wedding. There is nothing dull or commonplace about a fire engine. It is always bright and up to the mark, and ready for action. Evidently this line of thought occurred to a happy couple in Devonshire some time ago, for the five bridesmaids who were to support the bride at her nuptials rode to the church on the local fire engine, and it was one of the best attended weddings in the annals of the parish. A circus equestrienne had a very unique wedding in a continenta town some time ago. The man who drives the team of 40 horses was the brid groom, and he drove his own bride to church behind his 40 steeds, the bride herself being seated, dressed in all her splendid robes, on the top of the triumphal car. Whether their married life has been as triumphal as their wedding procession history does not relate, but we may formed a bridal team at a Brighton wedding and a very smart turnout it was. It was not so commodious, however, as the gayly decorated tram car, with white-gloved driver and conductor, which was the chosen vehicle at another lady's wedding in a Midland town. The bride, the bridegroom, their respective fathers and mothers, and all relatives and guests rode in their best attire both inside and upon the outside of the car, and the whole made a very brave show indeed.

A Betting Transaction.

Addressing a conference of the National Association of Head Teachers, at Manchester, recently on 'The School and the Home," Bishop Welldon, Dean of Manchester, said it sometimes happened that the home militated against school because of the ill example set by the parents. "I remember," said Dean Welldon,

"writing to the father of a pupil of mine-a peer of the realm-to tell him that his son had opened an account of transactions with a betting agent. He wrote back thanking me for the information, but adding, 'I think I ought to tell you that I am much worse myself.' I believe that statement was strictly true. "Every child deserved study and care, as though there were no other child in the world. If you go to Stratford-on-Avon and see the records of Shakespeare's baptism, and the cottage in which he sat with Ann Hathaway, you will realize that genins is sometning which God has kept in his own hands, and you and I must always be on the look out for genius.

INDIAN BURIAL MOUND WAS DICOVERED NEAR THE VILLACE OF LAKEFIELD

Review-Yesterday, Mr. C.B. James Secretary of the Department of Education and Dr. R. B. He has paid some attention to such matters and eventually wrote and asked the assistance of Dr. [ the body was interred, orr, who accompanied by Mr James. o hold a brief investigation.

On the farm, not far from the bank of the river, it is situated, and its dimensions, roughly given, are about 30 feet long by 20 feet across and from 18 to 36 inches high. The elements have done a work of demonition in the centuries since it was erected, and the dges are sloped out by attritions and ercs on of snow, rain and frost. Scattered over the province and in the bordering states of the union are found many similar mounds. Nearly all are identified with the same char ecteristics. And so well established are the facts, that it is now known al most to a certainty, by those famil ar with such matters, exactly where to excavate.

The three gentleman proceeded to the mound and Dr. Orr and James, recognizing the liken ss to the mounds opened in Michian, at once letermined where work should begin, Standing on the mound about six feet rom the head, when the sun was at neridian, and with his arms extended he shadow of Mr. James fell on a certain spot. It is evident that death had come to one of these interred, by violence. Firmly imbedded in the scull was a small stone axe, driven with such force as to split the shull, traversely or almost from ear to ear. Though pitted by the action of the earth, the Webster, of Smith and taken out to contour of the axe was preserved and his farm above Lavefield. On the form the place where the handle had been affixed was apparent. Dr. Orr said Webster has long had suspicions and that the finest set of teeth both upper and lower that he has ever seen are in this skull, as perfect to-day as when

Dr. Orr expressed the opinion that he remains were of persons of some note and consequence, possibly chiefs and followers, slain in tat le. The form of burial indicated this. A further exidence would be the finding of the remains of the funeral fire and inferring where this would be placed. some hasty excavation was made and the remains or the fire disclosed. He trought with him a fragment of wood partly burned and charred, and other pieces are still among the ashes.

This mound has been constructed in conformity with the ligends of and weil-known methods of the very early Indian tribes. They did not excavate as they did not have tools suitable for such work. Instead, when a burial was about to be made of any importance, the bodies were ranged in a circle and then covered with earth. stones and debris, generally procured from the shores of lakes and banks of streams and rivers, where the material would be soft and easly handled in buckets or some other rude utensils.
