AUGUSTINE STEAM ROTARY ENGINE

Invention Now at Ingles' Planing Mill Awaiting Coming of Inventor

The Augustine Steam Rotary Engine is now in Lindsay at Ingles' Planing Factory waiting the arrival of the inventor who will personally supervise its installation. The base of this engine only occupies a floor space of 24 x 26 inches and under test has delivered 57 brake horse power.
Mr. Augustine asks the stockholders and citizens of Lindsay to meet him during his stay here with a view of locating one of the first plants in Canada for the manufacture of this wonderful power producer. This engine can be manufactured up to a moderate horse power at a cost of three dollars per horse power in steam and very little higher in gasoline.
Patent rights cover both the gasoline and steam engines. Lindsay can at once obtain the right to manufacture a special type of this engine.
This engine will be the universal power producer; the demand for it will be enormous; the cost of production the lowest and yet they will sell at a premium.
Notice of Mr. Augustine's coming will shortly be given.
