tumbling and trapeze performances

The Sylvester band was in attendance and rendered a choice programme. This afternoon will see the close of the fair, and a great many directors the opening day. There are splendid speeding events to be pulled off, and the special attractions will be found in front of the grand stand.

Still the most sanguine of the directon yearly deposit with the added satisfac- ors would not dare predict that such an immense throng would turn out for the closing day, or at least, at ternoon of the fair.

> The early trains on both the C.P. R. and Grand Trunk lines on Saturday were crowded to overflowing when they reached the stations, and when the people found their way street and mingled with those came to town the previous day, and those who drove in from adjacent points, the streets presented an animated appearance.

By nine o'clock in the morning, Kent-st. was black with people, condition that never prevailed on the closing day of an exhibition in the past. As the morning grew, the the crowd increased in size, and it was apparent to all that a record crowd would throng the grounds in the afternoon.

The people, however, did not wait until after dinner to visit grounds. They flocked there by hundreds in the morning, and viewed the exhibits and displays to their heart's content.

At the early hour of 12.30 people were swarming into the grand stand at a rate that kept the officials charge hustling in the discharge of their duties. At 1 o'clock the "standing room only" sign could easily have been hung out, for between 2500 and 3000 individuals crowded and jostled each other and fanned mopped their perspiring faces in an endeavot to keep cool and feel comfortable. Those who could not obtain seating accommodation crowded around the front and sides of grand stand in a dense mass, while hundreds crossed the track and lined up along the fence bordering the track for many yards on either side of the band stand. The people kept coming until after three o'clock, and when a least, inspiring and wonderful.

"The greatest crowd in our tary," said President Ellis enthusiastically, as he looked from the judge's stand on the crowd before him.

"We will have to add another hundred feet to the grand stand." Vice President Channon, while another enthusiastic official had visions of increased ground space as he meditated on the rapid growth of the fair each year. These gentlemen were certainly justified in giving vent to their thoughts, for as stated above, the Central Fair of 1908 was doubtedly the finest held in Ontario. This statement is not based on the point of attendance, but on the quantity and excellence of the exhibits. Take horses and cattle for instance. While the exhibits in past years have been large and of a first class character, this year's entries surpassed all past records in numbers and also in quality. A visitor to Lindsay fair, who in his official capacity had visited the leading exhibitions in the province, stated that the exhibits in surpassed at any fair he visited, with the exception of Toronto Industrial.

Honest Billy, W. Gilks,

This race was a beauty, and one of the best ever seen on the local track It was full of thrilling incidents, and kept the excitement at fever heat until the finish. The first heat was dandy, and caused the crowd to sit up and take notice. It appeared to be anyobe's race at the end of the showed its mettle on the final stretch and won quite handily. The win was a popular one with the crowd. Minnie G., the Kinmount favorite, took second money, while the Penetang

The second heat promised to be repetition of the first so far as speeding went, but at the end of the first lap Lulu Chimes lost her feet went down, throwing her driver forward. Over the prostrate animal went Hargy K. and its driver, Dr. Cowan, who was picked up and carried from the track, it was thought, seriously injured. Lou Keswick also figured in the unfortunate mix-up. and the drivers of the three horses were all badly shaken up. Dr. Cowan's horse made an attempt to repeat its Peterboro episode and dashed along the track minus a driver, but it was brought to a halt. The other three horses continued in heat, Minnie G. finishing first, Commodore B. second, and Togo Owing to the accident the judges allowed the three horses to start in the LADY DRIVING CONTESTS. The contest between lady drivers, double team in harness, brought out Mrs. T. Downey, of Reaboro, with *a team of bays and Miss Leaske, of Taunton, with a chestnut team. Mrs. Downey carried off first prize. Both ladies were loudly applauded for their splendid friving.

The contest for single horse in harness driven by a lady brought out five contestants. The ladies requested a spurt around the track. The genial "Doc" Sinclair had a difficult task in this event in awarding the decision, which was as follows: Mrs. R. Lindsay, of Lindsay, 1st; Mrs. 3 Thos. Downey, of Reaboro, second.

GENTLEMEN'S TURNOUT. There were nine entries in this event. Two prizes were offered for the best turnout, single horse, harnessed to a top buggy and driven by a gentleman accompanied by a lady. Mr. Thos. Cowan, of Orono, carried off first prize, with a Port Perry gentleman winning second.
