GREET LAURIER

The naval policy, or rather lack of it, was also exposed, and spoken of as poor imperialism on the part of those whose battle cry had been for closer relations with the mother country.

Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, Mr. Murphy said, had not very much time for affairs of state. He was too busy buying automobiles by the dozen without tender and contrary to law in order that his overworked military staff at headquarters might have a good time. Just now he is fully occupied running over to Europe to review the troops of foreign nations and instructing them how to run their military affairs.

The speaker brought down the house by an account of several cases where the new government had discharged for partizanship men who had been head for three or four years before the election of last September.

When the late Liberal government was in power the house had united and risen as whole to sing God Save the King after they had approved of the government's naval policy. Now the jingoes of Ontario and the Nationalists of Quebec were united in condemning a policy they had previously approved, and an appeal was about to be made to the opposition to unite with the government to lift the navy out of politics. Mr. Borden had made his bed, let him lie upon it and solve his own difficulties. No political party has ever before asked the opposition to help them out of a difficulty. He concluded by asking support for the next Liberal candidate.

When Sir Wilfrid decided to make the present tour of Ontario, he wanted to have the affairs of the country discussed. He explained that Sir Wilfrid, at the particular moment was going to the Opera House to speak. He complained that the Toronto Conservative papers gave no space to the present tour. Do the Conservative orators tell you that the Pope of Rome is about to appoint a Cardinal in Montreal. That is not the fault of Mr. Borden, it is the business of the church of Rome. Laurier's heart burns with but one ambition, a united British Empire. The speaker said Sir Wilfrid's policy had been first and always for British preference. His leader then looked for wider markets. He thought to unite the two great parts of Canada. We are facing a new set of conditions. How is the vast British Empire to be unified? The speaker asked if any Conservative in the audience approved of Mr. Monk or Pelletier, or Mr. Nantel in the Borden Cabinet. Mr. King concluded amid a roar of cheers.

A STIRRING ADDRESS

Hon. Mr. Graham, in a vigorous speech, dwelt on the cost of living, the transportation problem, and new markets and how to get them.

"Our opponents sneered last year that the cost of living could not be reduced by any proposition that would help the agriculturists of Canada. I am able to quote you an instance I heard today, showing how free trade with the United States would have shaken off some of the shackles that the consumer bears.

THE COST OF LIVING

"I am told that a car of Canadian canned goods costs the wholesaler $2,300 more at the point of production than American canned goods cost the American wholesaler at their point of production. The Canadian combine soaks the Canadian wholesaler $2,300 a car, and they are laughing at the ease by which duplicity won the last election."

In demonstrating the folly of the new Government's policy of degrading the Transcontinental, Mr. Graham said that the Grand Trunk Railway between Toronto and Montreal was supposed to be the best road in Canada. The Grand Trunk Pacific was to be a better road than the Toronto to Montreal line, all the way from coast to coast, with but one heavy grade as exception. On it, as planned, one locomotive would have hauled more than two locomotives on any other transcontinental road in America.

DEGRADING THE G.T.P.

"If they are degrading their road, I call them to account to the people of Canada," cried Mr. Graham.

A GREAT SLANDER

The Hon. Sydney Fisher spoke for the Province of Quebec.

"You heard throughout Ontario that the Liberals had a French-Canadian and a Roman Catholic at the head of their party and he could not be loyal to the British Empire. No greater slander was ever repeated against a man or a people."

Mr. Borden had appeared on the platform of Nationalist candidates in the eastern townships of Quebec and endorsed them.

It was the contrast between the conduct of the ultra-loyal Conservative party and the party which had proposed a Canadian navy to aid the Empire and had granted the British preference.

Sir Wilfrid had never gone into Quebec and excited his compatriots against a harmonious policy with Britain. The unity of Canadian nationhood had been the achievement of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The Conservative party, with their allies, the Nationalists, were now trying to rend that unity in twain. Mr. Bourassa had declared against a navy or a contribution of any kind, and it was on that cry the Conservatives hoped to carry Quebec.

"I claim for my native Province that she is the bulwark of unity," declared Mr. Fisher. "If you think for a moment that Quebec is untrue to Canadian nationality, you are untrue."

THE MAJORITY'S MISTAKE

Sir Wilfrid's call to speak was the signal for an outburst of cheering lasting for more than a minute.

"The majority makes mistakes sometimes," said Sir Wilfrid Laurier, after referring to his lack of his former trappings of office. "The unfortunate part of it is that when the majority makes mistakes the minority has to suffer. I suppose, there are some Conservatives here."

"Yes," called a voice, aggressively. "Well, then, you are welcome," continued Sir Wilfrid placidly. "I have known some wonderful cures to have been performed by very humble means. If I can open the eyes of a single Conservative here tonight I shall feel well repaid."

"What has the Government of Mr. Borden done in the year they have been in office? Mr. King asked that question tonight and I repeat it. The Conservative Government, from the moment they came into power have been rent in twain."

THE TWO DEMONS

"Two demons are ruling the roost, the demon of Nationalism and the demon of Jingoism. The Conservatives are sowing the wind and reaping the whirlwind. They got into office by rousing the passions of Quebec, and the antagonistic passions of Ontario, and for fear of these passions since, they have not been able to do anything. I charge the men who now sit in office with having obtained office by means of the most unpatriotic appeal."

"Let me appeal to you, my fellow-countrymen," said Sir Wilfrid in opening his first reference to the naval policy that he has made since the Ontario tour began two weeks ago. "For what I am going to say I challenge contradiction from anybody. 'We are a nation,' Mr. Borden said, and I give him credit for 100 years, but we are not forever guaranteed peace. We have 1,000 miles of defenceless coast on the Pacific, and that much more on the Atlantic."

THE NAVAL QUESTION

"At the Imperial Conference some years ago, it was represented to us that we were doing nothing for our defence. We agreed to take charge of Halifax and Esquimaux and later, start a navy of our own. In 1909, we passed a resolution, accepted by all parties, even Mr. Monk, leader of the Nationalists, to organize a Canadian navy. Then, to make political capital, against us, the Conservative party opposed the Government's proposal, but a schism occurred in the Conservative party. It divided on racial grounds, French and English. In Quebec the Conservatives, almost without exception, took the ground that no navy should be established, and that we should never fight for England under any consideration whatever.

BUILD NAVY IN CANADA.

"I said, Canada should build a navy in Canada, equip it in Canada, man it in Canada, and that it should be under the control of the people of Canada. That was our policy at the last election, and that is the policy of the Liberal party now. We want a Canadian navy, but if England were in danger, no, not in danger, but if England were in trial, every Canadian would assist the Mother Country. We are Canadians first, last and all the time; but I say, if the Mother Country requires our services, we will be only too glad to give it to her. As I have said before, if England were in peril, I would take the stump and tell my people in Quebec we must assist our Mother Country."

THE WINNIPEG MEMORIAL

Sir Wilfrid referred to the memorial calling for unity between the parties on the naval question.

"It is not to me that this memorial should be addressed," declared the Liberal leader, "but to the two factions of the Conservative party—the Nationalists and Jingoists."

The big crowd saw the point and roared its appreciation.

"It is not to the Liberals that the memorial should be addressed; we have a naval policy. I have told you what it is. The Nationalists have denounced me as a traitor to my own race, but I do not mind that. We are all human; we have, all of us, deep down in our hearts they may be, human passions. To the evil passions of both parties, the Conservative party addressed themselves to win the fight. But we will not follow on that course. We are above that consideration. We were waiting for the policy of Mr. Borden, and we shall judge it on its merits. I appeal to you, my fellow citizens, to look at that question on its merits, also, and on its merits alone."

STILL THEY DON'T KNOW

"What is this policy of Mr. Borden? I do not know. He went to London to consult the Admiralty, and asked over there for his conclusions, he said: 'I don't know; I must consult my colleagues.' He came back to Canada. 'Well, what now?' and the reply was still the same, 'I don't know: We are waiting for more information from England.' Now Mr. Foster has gone back to London."

Sir Wilfrid told a story to illustrate the position. A famous acrobat undertook to jump over St. Paul's Cathedral. He was an acrobat of no mean powers, but he undertook to do what Mr. Borden is trying to do now. The famous acrobat went to St. Paul and looked over the ground. Then he refused to jump. There was no straw on the place where he was to alight. Mr. Foster has gone over to London. He has been sent to bring over more straw. We'll have to wait. Meanwhile we'll stand by the act we put on the statute books, which meets our whole duty as British subjects."

DELATED BY ELECTIONS

Sir Wilfrid referred to the difference in preaching and practice of the Conservatives in opposition and in office, instancing the delayed bye-elections.

"They don't dare to bring on the election in Richelieu, Quebec at the same time as in Macdonald, Manitoba, because their policy in Richelieu and their policy in Macdonald are not the same."

The cost of living and the need of markets for the products of the West

BE READY FOR ELECTION

"Elections sometimes," concluded Sir Wilfrid, "come like a thief in the night. Let us be prepared for a new election at any moment. Let this be our new motto: 'DON'T CRY, DON'T WHINE; PREPARE FOR THE NEW FIGHT, AND PREPARE RIGHT AWAY.'"
