The P. V. Branch of the O. W. I. held a most successful meeting at the home of Mrs. Wm. Joyne on the 2nd inst, with an attendance of over thirty women. The chair was very ably filled by Mrs. Jos. Lee, Vice-Pres. The meeting was opened in the usual manner, and after the necessary business was disposed with, a splendid paper on "Canadian Laws as They Affect Women" was given by Miss M. Cullis. This was followed by a piano solo by Miss Gertrude Moynes, which was much appreciated. Mrs. Jos. Moynes then read a paper on "Canadian Authors" which was both interesting and instructive, after which Miss G. Moynes again favored the ladies with a piano solo. The roll call was the next item on the programme to which a number of the ladies responded by giving some recipe or valuable hint on house-keeping. Rev. Mr. Roe, of Cambray, was also present at this meeting at the close of which he made a short speech complimenting the ladies on the work of their society. The meeting was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem, after which a social half hour was spent and the usual refreshments served by the hostess. Misses E. Smithson and F. Moynes were appointed delegates to attend the Annual Convention held in Toronto in November.

Mrs. Bartheau and little daughter of Toronto, are spending a few weeks among friends here.

DETECTIVES SPY ON DRUMMERS

to stop for several days at a hotel without arousing the suspicion of those whom he least desires to attract. During his stay he will find out how many calls are made during the day by the salesman in whom he is interested, and also, much other informative data.

RINGS UP CUSTOMERS

Sometimes a detective makes a point of ringing up on the telephone certain customers of the firm he represents to inquire whether the regular representative has recently made a call as arranged. If a visit has been paid, well and good; but if not, the matter is immediately reported to headquarters by the detective, who also sends along any other information he may have acquired. Occasionally, however, travellers get an advance tip as to the whereabouts of a detective from a friend at the head office, and it is needless to say that the somewhat unscrupulous commercials are then exceptionally busy.

On receipt of a detective's report, the head of the firm weighs the facts which have been ascertained together with the orders and inquiries which have been sent in by the traveller, and, if the decision is favorable, nothing is said; but, on the other hand, the traveller may be severely reprimanded; and even informed that his services are no longer required. The existence of the secret report, however, is seldom, if ever, disclosed.

ON WRONG TRAIL

Some curious incidents were related to the writer by a drummer regarding these detectives. One was recently sent to keep an eye on a traveller who was supposed to be doing a certain city on the Lakes. He was furnished with a complete account of the proposed journey, together with a list of the customers. The detective searched most diligently, but cautiously, everywhere, but he never so much as caught sight of his man, although his quarry's appearance was well known to him. After several hasty communications with headquarters, it was found that the suspected traveller had shifted to another territory altogether.

A short time ago an unfamiliar face was noted at a well known sort of knights of the bag. The usual advances were made to the stranger, and in due course, a careful and friendly reference to the nature of his business was made. A stranger appeared to give even faintest indication of his "line," and his conduct not unnaturally aroused certain suspicions. When he left, the conclusion was arrived at that he was a detective, and it was decided that everything should be made unpleasant for him as possible. Much trouble was taken to do so and among other things it was arranged that he should not be at the time asked for. A month or so later, however, the detective was discovered that he was a new man, and that he was traveling for himself. He did not quite stand the rovers, and he was rather bashful.
