Some Remarks on Things in General

By "THE STROLLER."

To mes of ms the idea of railroad building is simply that of laying raus from one town to another, at a cost et so many plunks per mile. This is the idea that permeates our fegis arive bodies, in their gifts to the ratiroads viz., so many acres of land, and so many dollars of money, per mile to help them build the road. In days when the country was new. no doubt this was the principle feature of railroad building, for the roads, as a mule, made the towns, and it did not cost them much to get all the ground they wanted for stations and yards. As the country advances, bowever, and we foegin to grow cities such as Montreal, Toronto and Winnipez, the terminal facilities required take on a very large share of the expense, especially with new roads wanting entrances into then. We thus see one road buying up another road and paying a good price for it, simply to secure the terminal ficilities that the smaller road had at some flange city. This was notably the case where the Canadian Northern bought the Lake St. John rold in order to secure their Quebec City property. It would have cost the larger road more to gen a suitable entrance into Quebec tuan they paid for the whole road.

a preference. As most, in fact all of the materials that the colonies have to export, are raw materials, and as Great Britain allows these to come in free, it necessarily follows that the only way a preference could los given would be by the British taxing themselves on these raw mutorieds for our benefit. It sounds very nice when the matter is spoken of loy a smooth-tongued orator, but when it gets into cold prints and is studied out by the thinkers, the angument will not hold water. As a matter of fact, to-day Britain gets not only the cream of everything that is going, but it gets in on the ground floor as regards price, every time. As a consequence, the British workman eats German, French or Beligian sub gar, and pays less for it than the workman who makes it. He eats Canadian or American pheese, foutter or flour, and gets it as cheap, some times cheaper, than the natives of the country that groduce them. He can fouy American nails for a cent a pound less than the American has to pay for them alt the factory. Trany reesonable man, it would seem to b

If it does no worse than keep our manufacturers from falling asleep, or imagining that they own the country, the preference will have proved a blessing to us. Speaking as Canadians, we would hail with delight a preference on wheat and flour and other of our products that go over there, but we would have to admit (subrosa) they were softies for giving it. It is astonishing how even our most rapid protectionist manufacturers want their own raw material free, and object as strenuously as the bizgest free-trader, to any duty being placed on it. An Important Judgment.

Last week, in London, Sir William Muleck established a legal precedent in the judgment which he gave in non jury case that came before nim for aljudication. A Protestant husband brought action to restrain his wife, who is a Roman Catholic, from sending their children to a separate school. His lordship ruled, basing his d-cision partly on a judgment given by Justice Anglin two years ago, that the husband had a right to say whother or not his children should go to a school where religious teaching, objectionable to him, was given. The judge also ruled that a (separate school was a religious school; and therefore the courts, or authorities, had no right to send any child there, and had no jurisdiction in regard to them as they had in regard to pub lic schools. This decision creates a precedent, that will have quite an | important bearing upon the question
