FUNERAL OF PALMER EYRES TODAY ATTENDED BY MANY CITIZENS

(From Tuesday's Post)

The funeral of the late William P. Eyres took place this afternoon from the family residence, Adelaide-st. to Riverside cemetery. The esteem in which the deceased was held was attested by the throngs who visited the house during the past few days, and took a last look at one whose death is deeply deplored on all sides. Another tribute of respect and love was evidenced in the large gathering of friends who gathered at the house this afternoon where impressive and affecting funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. P. Wilson, of the Cambridge-st. Methodist church. Afterwards the cortege proceeded to the Riverside cemetery where the remains were laid at rest.

A number of the closest associates of the deceased were unable to be present as they are scattered throughout the Dominion. They all, however, sent messages breathing the deepest sympathy and regret to the parents.

The pallbearers were his two brothers, Mr. Gardner and Dr. Herbert Eyres, and Messrs Stanley Beal of the Beal Leather Co; Ford Moynes, of the Warder; J. MacDonnell, of the Canadian Cereal Milling Co.; and Dr. Oswald Gibbs, of Peterboro.

Among the many beautiful floral wreaths sent by friends were clusters of pink roses, calla lilies and lily of the valley from Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Beal and family.

An anchor of flowers from Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Adams.

A large spray of pink and white chrysanthemums from Miss Marjorie and Miss Irene Warner and their brothers.

A DISCIPLE OF ISAAK WALTON COMES TO DEFENCE OF CARP

Examiner: "Give a dog a bad name and then hang him," or rather, "give a fish a bad name and then destroy it," is a proverb that can be applied to the carp, judging from the condemnatory remarks passed upon this species of fish by "Deckhand," in a recent issue of the Examiner. Were there a piscatorial court where this much maligned fish could enter an action for defamation of character, I think it would stand a good chance of securing heavy damages. As, however, Mr. Carp is unable himself to clear the stigma attached to his name, I should like to take up the cudgels in his defence.

"The carp is a herbivorous fish, and came originally from Asia. In very early times it was introduced into Europe, where it is extensively reared in artificial ponds." The monks probably brought it over to England, by whom it was highly esteemed as an article of diet, as is evidenced by its being found in the moats surrounding the ancient monasteries. "From Europe it was introduced into America some years ago, and has been widely distributed by the Government." It is remarkable for its longevity (it is believed to attain the age of 100 years or more) and also for its cunning. IsaaK Walton, that great authority on the gentle art of angling, called it the Freshwater Fox, because of its cleverness in evading capture. How the idea of its being destructive to other fish originated I do not know, but some two or three years ago, if my memory serves me right (I stand open to correction), the question was raised in the United States, and a commission was appointed to investigate the matter. As no scientific evidence of its destructive qualities could be secured, and as it was looked upon as a valuable marketable commodity, (some hundreds of thousands of dollars worth being sold annually) no action was taken for its extermination. The origin of its appearance in Lake Simcoe is generally accepted locally as this. A gentleman not a hundred miles from Newmarket, procured some a few years ago, which he kept in a private reservoir. Somehow or other the reservoir burst and the fish escaped, making their way into the Holland River and Lake Simcoe, and so travelling south in the Trent Canal. I don't think there is the slightest danger of the stock of fish in these waters becoming depleted by the advent of the carp. Being herbivorous, the wild rice may probably suffer. The carp is only at home in muddy, stagnant waters, and I venture to assert that it will not be found in appreciable numbers except where these conditions prevail. It will not thrive in clear or running water. I have caught many carp, but never found them except in stagnant ponds and ancient moats in England, where they were probably placed hundreds of years ago by the monks. Rice Lake, with its beds of wild rice and mud will be an ideal breeding place for this species of fish. As to its esculent qualities, about which there is considerable prejudice, that is merely an individual taste. Properly cooked the carp is "O. K." The monks of old-traditional epicures as they were, evidently did not despise it. It is largely eaten by the Jews and its marketable value in Toronto, is, I am told, somewhere in the neighborhood of 10 cents per lb. From a sportsman's point of view, too, the pleasure of having a battle with this Reynard of the water, will give as great a thrill of excitement as a lunge or bass. They often attain a weight of 8 or 10 pounds, or more, and I did hear of one being killed at Balsore, below Kirkfield, that weighed 26 lbs. This, however, like most fishermen's yarns, should, I think, be taken "cum grano salis." Until positive evidence is produced of the carp's guilt, let us adjudge him innocent of the criminal propensities with which he is charged.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Will Be Rigid.

Newark, N.J., Nov. 29.—"If I find any city or state official guilty of negligence in the inspection of this building," said Prosecutor of County Mott yesterday, as he stood by the ruins of the factory in which 24 girls lost their lives by fire last Saturday, "there will be the bitterest sort of prosecution."

Accordingly, a coroner's jury of six was sworn in, the first of its kind that has sat here in twenty years. There will also be separate enquiries by the grand jury, which visited the scene yesterday; by the State Labor Department, and the city building department.

Funeral of many of the victims were held yesterday afternoon. Many of the girls and women killed were supporting their families, in part or in whole. One woman left a blind daughter almost penniless, and there is much actual want in other households. A relief fund, started Sunday, has now reached $2,000.

Tampico, Mexico, Nov. 29.—Miss Grace Rolf, the 17-year-old Nebraska girl, who disappeared from a ranch near Tampico several weeks ago in company with Segundo Selivero, a noted bandit, has been found and brought here. Miss Rolf was found Saturday about fifty miles inland from Tampico, deserted.
