Will Discuss Church Union

To the Editor, Permit me through the widely read columns of the Post to remind the ministers, and especially the elders, of the Lindsay Presbytery of the very important meeting of that court to be held in St. Andrew's church, Lindsay, on Tuesday, December 13th, at 10 o'clock. The exceptional importance of this meeting is due to the fact that in addition to the disposal of routine business, the vital matter of church union will be discussed and voted on. I take the liberty of most earnestly appealing, particularly to the elders to familiarize themselves with the merits of the grave matters and come prepared to take an intelligent part in the discussion. Yours most truly, C. S. LORD, Moderator of Presbytery.

Central Telegraphic Schools

Stratocona, Alta., Vernon, B.C., Morden, Man., besides several Ontario towns, have sent representatives to the above named school, which enjoys a splendid reputation for training young men for railway work. The school is located at Yonge and Gerard-ets., and is affiliated with the well-known Central Business College of Toronto, and is a reliable school in every particular.

Business Education

The success of the majority of Business Colleges in Ontario at least is a good indication of the demand for practical education, and should prompt our authorities to give more attention to this particular work in our Public and High schools. We learn on good authority that one prominent business college—the Central Business College, of Toronto—enrolls annually more than fifteen hundred students, and that it never has any graduates out of employment. Indeed, we are told many business firms find much difficulty in securing the necessary well trained assistants to carry on their work successfully, and they are now compelled to look to the business colleges almost exclusively to supply their requirements. A business education is a very safe guarantee of a good salary in these times of commercial activity. Keep on the cold by getting a package of "Weather Strip." at CINNAMON'S.—widit.

GHOST CONFESSES

The Police Solve the Mystery of a Haunted Farm

It was ten o'clock at night and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, Uttoxeter, were having supper when they were startled by hearing strange noises, and presently boots and bottles came falling down the stairs, thrown by some invisible hand. Their supper thus rudely disturbed, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson rushed upstairs to find the place in a state of wild confusion. The bedroom had been completely ransacked, mattresses had been carried from one room to another, ornaments had disappeared, and the place was in a condition of chaos. Convinced some intruder was on the premises, Mr. Wilson called several hands, and the premises were systematically searched, but without result. Much perplexed, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson retired to rest, but scarcely had they extinguished the light when all sorts of pranks were commenced by what seemed to be a supernatural visitant. A table was spruced out of the room, all sorts of articles flew in through the door, and when Mr. Wilson got up to investigate he was assaulted by bottles and other missiles. Uncanny noises were heard in different parts of the house, but a search again proved unavailing. This was only the beginning of a series of remarkable incidents during the following days. Mrs. Wilson while at work was made a target for all sorts of missiles, knives, forks, and bottles being hurled at her from an invisible source with great force. On several occasions the knives just missed her head and were deeply embedded in the doors. Twenty-seven window panes were smashed by flying stones. Neighbors who were summoned to the house by the terrified occupants were greeted with such scant courtesy that they had to retire. A constable who watched the house one night saw a light extinguished in a room which it was said he knew to be absolutely empty. Then came the denouement. Rigorous police investigations were set on foot, and as the result it was announced that a girl, aged fourteen, employed at the farm, had confessed that she is the mysterious spook who has been playing these dangerous tricks. How she managed to deceive the household is a mystery. It transpired that several years ago she had sunstroke, and has always been peculiar in her manner since.

THE OLDEST CLOWN

"Jimmy" Doughty Takes a Benefit at Brighton

James Doughty, the oldest living clown still before the public, celebrated his 92nd birthday by a benefit performance on the West Pier at Brighton, where for the past thirty-two years he has appeared with his cleverly-trained dogs. The square enclosure formed at the head of the pier was lined by admirers, and as "Jimmy," with painted face and attired in clown's costume, emerged from his little pavilion, he was heartily cheered. In spite of his great age, and notwithstanding his frail dress, Doughty braved a boisterous south-westerly wind in a manner which showed his wonderful vitality. So strong was the gale that a wire-haired terrier, comically dressed in the latest feminine fashion, was almost blown over as, followed by his master, it walked on its hind legs "shaking hands" with highly-amused adults and delighted children. In addition to jumping through hoops, the dogs performed various tricks, and the crowd laughed heartily when, after feigning sleep, they, at the cry "Police," scampered in all directions. Several arpered to give their services, and Doughty, judging by the manner in which the crowd contributed the collection, had a "bumper" benefit. He was heartily congratulated, and the substantial presents showered upon him included one from a millionaire. Doughty attributes his great age to his active life. "I was an acrobat," he declared with a smile.

AN EYE TO ECONOMY

A young lady who taught a class of small boys in the Sunday-school, desired to impress on them the meaning of returning thanks before a meal. Turning to one in the class, whose father was a deacon in the church, she asked him: "William, what is the first thing your father says when he sits down to the table?" "He says, 'Go slow with the butter; it's twenty-eight cents a pound,'" replied the youngster.
