Obituary

WILLET AUSTIN.

Death has removed another of the first settlers of Haliburton county in the person of Mr. Willet Austin, who passed away at his home in Ingoldsby on Tuesday last.

Besides his faithful wife, he is survived by three sons and one daughter.

The funeral, in charge of Rev. J. M. Whyte, took place on Friday to the Ingoldsby Methodist church, thence to the Ingoldsby cemetery, where he was buried under the rites of the Orange Association, of which he was a member.

MRS. RICHARD CAREW

The death occurred on Saturday morning, November 26th, of the oldest resident in this vicinity, in the person of Sarah Groves, wife of the late Richard Carew.

The late Mrs. Carew was a member of St. James' Anglican church, Emily and by her loveable and charitable disposition won for herself numerous friends.

Surviving her is one daughter, Mrs. G. Calvert, who resides near Bethel Church, and one son, Mr. J. Carew, who resides in the third line at Emily near Middle Road Church.

The funeral of the deceased, which was held Saturday from the residence of her grandson, Mr. G. Carew, where she resided, was very largely attended.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. Gus-

WAGES IN GLASGOW

Municipal Employees Beg for an Increase in the Minimum

At a mass meeting of Glasgow Corporation employees, Mr. Richard Davies, general secretary, said the wages paid to municipal employees in Glasgow, the conditions under which they worked, and the treatment they received from those in authority could not be compared to what prevailed in a town like Leicester.

LOCKJAW FROM A CUT

The danger in little accidents was illustrated at a London court. Mr. F. Danford Thomas held an inquest upon Arthur Pittman, four years of age, son of a potato salesman.

WRITER OF "KELLY"

The Author, a Glasgow Man, Died in Tragic Circumstances

The author and composer of "Kelly" has just died in tragic circumstances. His name was Will Letters, and he was known throughout the music-hall profession as a man of many admirable traits.

For several years he has appeared with the Pierrots at various summer resorts, and he was thus engaged when attacked with a fatal hemorrhage of the lungs. It occurred last week when he was at work in his white suit and painted face.

He was engaged successfully in various pantomime productions in England, Ireland, and Scotland, and for a time played the part of Sergeant Lightning in Fred Karno's "Dandy Thieves."

With a certain gift of melody he put together a number of music-hall song successes and provided Willie Bard with one of his greatest pantomime hits, "Put me on an island where the girls are few," which was wedded to a garbled version of Mendelssohn's "Spring Song."

Later he wrote "Has anybody here seen Kelly?" a song which became so popular as to be a nuisance. The song was taken to Canada and the United States and was the rage of the last song season.

He was a Glasgow man, and something of a favorite in that city. Following upon several years' approved appearances in pantomime, he had been re-engaged as chief comedian at one of the Birmingham theatres next season.

MILLIONAIRES' DISPLAY

Ten Thousand Pounds Spent Over Grouse Shooting

Mr. Harry Payne Whitney, the millionaire, who derives his wealth from banking and railway enterprise, is illustrating the pitch of costliness to which sport in England may attain.

Mr. Whitney left New York on August 13th by the White Star liner Celtic, and disembarked at Holyhead. With him travelled Mrs. Whitney, their two children, and a number of sportsmen he has brought over to the grouse shooting, a party.

Mr. H. Burdon, Mr. Payne Thompson, and several other well-known "New Yorkers" travelled in luxuriant style and occupied the private suites specially fitted, and for which a charge of $700 each is reported to have been made.

During the early part of the voyage the millionaires' party kept to their own rooms, but later on dined in the saloon and entered upon an exchange of socialities with other passengers.

Mrs. Whitney, who is a daughter of Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, and is said to be worth a couple of millions in her own right, appeared in a number of magnificent costumes during the voyage, and on one occasion wore a diamond necklace worth $50,000.

WOMAN'S TRANSITION

Lord Aberdeen Attributes It to Growth in Public Life

Lord Aberdeen, speaking in England, referred to what he called "the added and increasing demands upon women by the great transition going on in the world."

"I once heard of the father of a large family—all daughters—whose means were rather circumscribed, as is often the case with military men. Some friend suggested that the daughters might do something. They do a great deal," said his father; "look at all those beautiful embroideries." It was pointed out to him that doing something meant in the way of earning a living, whereupon he at once indignantly replied: "My daughters (laughter.) The state of mind has received several rude shocks lately. Times have changed, and our daughters and their position have changed with them. There is the more reason in fitting them for the wider outlook which is opening before them."

WATCHMAN'S TERRIBLE DEATH

A fatal explosion, the cause of which is a mystery, occurred at the Prospect Mills of Messrs. Joseph Hoyle and Son, woollen manufacturers, Longwood, England.

A GILBERT WHITE STORY

Thomas Hoar, the devoted servant upon whom Gilbert White, the naturalist, depended to carry out his garden plans and to look after his comfort in many ways, was noted for his exactness. H. C. Shelley, in "Gilbert White and Selbourne," gives an amusing illustration:

There was one occasion when Thomas came to report, "Please, sir, I've been and broke a glass."

"Broke a glass, Thomas! How did you do that?"

"I'll show you, sir," he rejoined, as he disappeared for a moment. Returning with a glass in his hand, he let it fall on the floor, remarking: "That's how I broke it, sir."

"There, go along, Thomas; you are a great goose," said his master, adding to himself, "and I was as great a one for asking such a foolish question."—Youth's Companion.
