Agricultural Education Development

The question of agricultural education is by no means of recent origin for in October, 1792, we find the Governor of Upper Canada calling together the leading farmers of the time and organizing an agricultural society. There is in existence a letter from Geo. Washington that was read before this Society at Niagara in which he discusses agricultural matters.

The agitation for agricultural education in Ontario began to take concrete form about 1850, when two text books on Agriculture were compiled, and some time later a third was published by Edgerton Ryerson, then Superintendent of Education. In the year 1832 a professorship of agriculture was established at Toronto University. The first steps towards founding a School of Education were taken in 1869 by the Hon. John Carling, of London, then Commissioner of Agriculture for Ontario.

The Rev. W. F. Clarke, of Guelph, was appointed to visit the American colleges of Agriculture and report his findings with a view to establishing an agricultural college in Ontario. The result of his report was the purchasing of a site for buildings and land for a farm in the vicinity of Mimico in the year 1871. The contract for the building was let, but owing to delays, work was not begun just then. In the interval leading farmers and stockmen declared the site unsuitable for various reasons, with the result that a Commission was appointed to examine the proposed site at Mimico, and other sites situated at Guelph, Whitby, and Woodstock. The Commission chose the present site at Guelph, Buildings were erected, and the School of Agriculture, as it was then called, was formally opened in May, 1874, with an attendance of twenty-eight students.

For a few years the school made slow progress, owing to contention and changes in the staff. In 1879 Jas. Mills was appointed principal, and the name of the institution changed from the Ontario School of Agriculture to the Ontario Agricultural College and Experimental Farm. Since that time the College has made rapid progress until to-day it is recognized all over the civilized world as the most efficient agricultural college in America.

After the establishing of the Agricultural College we find in 1885 the beginning of the Farmers' Institute movement, and later all the branches which go to make up our present complete Department of Agriculture. The latest factor in agricultural education is the establishing of branch offices of the department of agriculture. These branch offices are in charge of a graduate of the Ontario Agricultural College, who is also a member of the staff of the High School or Collegiate in the Town or village where the branch office is located.

The Victoria County branch of the Department of Agriculture is putting on two short courses for farmers this winter. A three day course in stock and seed judging on January 24, 25, and 26th, at which the following classes of farm stock will be judged and discussed. Light and heavy horses, beef and dairy cattle, Besides livestock, some time will be taken up with weeds and seeds. The local representative, through the Farmers' Institute branch, has secured the services of the following men to conduct this course: John Guardhouse, C. R. Klink, B.S.A., C. F. Bailey, B.S.A., and C. M. McRae, B.S.A. These are all practical men, highly competent to handle their respective subjects, and no one can afford to miss three days' course.

The six weeks' course will begin on February 1st and will be conducted by the County Representative and his assistant. The subjects taken up will include stock raising, grain growing, cultivation of the soil and drainage, weeds and weed seeds, poultry, orchards, and small fruits, dairying and farm accounts. There is no entrance fee and no standard of education required. It is earnestly hoped that the young men in particular will take advantage of this course.

There is one farm paper in Canada that in over twenty years has never missed an opportunity of promoting the interests of the farmer, and has in no small way assisted in securing the passage of every measure that has been obtained for the improvement of his condition. That paper is The Weekly Sun. The Sun's market reports have no equal for accuracy. They are each week of special interest and value to every man who works the land. Every farmer should be a reader of The Sun.

HAMAR GREENWOOD

An Interesting Glance at the Whitty Boy Who Has Been Elected for Sunderland

The election of Hamar Greenwood in Sunderland was one of the events of the present election in Great Britain that gave the Government the greatest gratification, it being a notable Liberal gain. And it was also gratifying to a large number of people in this country, who have followed with more than ordinary interest, the rapid rise of this young Canadian.

Whatever people may think of Hamar Greenwood's political views, there are no two opinions as to his personal qualifications, and those who know him best say that it was only to be expected that having been defeated in York in January last, he should go in to win in December.

It is not many years ago that the member for Sunderland became known throughout Canada for his part in the famous university strike. It was he and a student named Tucker who organized that strike among the political science students at Toronto University in 1894, that lasted for several months and ended in an official inquiry. Tucker, it will be remembered, was editor of the students' paper, "Varsity," and in the impetuosity of youth he undertook to editorially castigate the faculty. That was the beginning of the trouble that ended in he and Greenwood organizing a revolution.

His fellow-strike-leader may have been hot-headed, but Greenwood's friends say he was cool-headed himself. A good boxer and an all-round athlete, he had developed control of temper, and in this connection it is interesting to recall that he was one of the best cricketers in Canada. Born at Whitby, he had attended the Whitty Collegiate Institute, and here, at the age of sixteen, he was chosen a member of the International cricket team, being large for his age. This team comprised the best cricketers in Canada, who were matched against the "Wick of the United States."

RAISING SUNKEN SHIPS

Filled with Air Which Drives Out the Water

The French submarine boat Narval, which was wrecked and sunk some time ago, has been raised, and has served for some interesting experiments which prove the unreliability of the often recommended method of raising sunken ships by filling them with air. The Narval was sunk by admitting water, and was then filled with air under pressure. Before sufficient water could be expelled the cover of the manhole, which was connected with a view of resisting external pressure alone, was forced open, and the water rushed in. The cover was again pumped into the hull. Suddenly the stern of the boat appeared above the surface of the water, while the bow still remained at the bottom, so that the boat assumed an almost vertical position. Finally the bow was also raised from the bottom by pumping in still more air. In contrast with this the process actually used in the practical raising of the vessel was far simpler and easier. A scow was anchored over the sunken boat, to which it was attached by chains at low tide. The raising tide lifted the scow and the submarine, and at high tide they could be towed to port. It was shown that it was possible to raise the submarine without making use of the tide by sinking the scow to a certain depth by means of water ballast, making it fast to the submarine, and then pumping out the water.

LIFE OF ADVENTURE

Newly Man's Experiences in Greenland, the Crimea, and China

Few men have been fated to have a more thrilling life of adventure than Tom Grant, galeman, diver, and crossing-keeper at Bo'ness Dock, who died at the ripe age of seventy-eight. Son of a whale harpooner, he had an inbred desire for the sea, and at the age of eleven was bound for four years as an apprentice to the whaling trade. His ship was ice-bound off Greenland, and ultimately became a total wreck, and many were the dangers he passed through before landing with the rest of the shipwrecked crew in a boat on a Danish island.
