FLESH FLIES

Can Do No Damage if Given No Place to Lay Their Eggs

When the sheep's wool becomes filthy and the skin irritated, an ideal condition is made for the work of the maggot fly. And when the maggots get a start they create a more and more friendly harbor for their kind as they work and increase in numbers under the wool. A sheep infected with maggots is a most pitiful sight, helpless against the parasites eating out its flesh until the sheep dies, its flesh gnawed out in a most cruel manner. For the sake of humanity, if for no other reason, sheep should be saved from much suffering.

These flies do no damage if not given a suitable place to lay their eggs. Sheep should be watched carefully, especially in warm damp weather, and dirty tag-locks or other filth clipped off and a little tar dabbed on if the skin is chafed. These maggots also get in their work under rams' horns. Indeed, a ram with heavy horns lying close to his head will hardly pass through a summer without infection unless the flies are kept away by putting some tar on the ram's head.

An infected sheep can be told by the fact that it refuses to eat, stands with its head down and most often by itself, and stamps its feet or jerks its head exactly as irritation by maggots would lead one to expect. The remedy is simple. Cut away the wool close. Clean out all maggots, using turpentine to wash them out. Smear the place thoroughly with tar. Then watch the sheep to see that the flies do not again start in the same place. Thoroughness in cleaning out the parasites is essential, for one left in will start the damage all over.

GOOD CHICKENS

Something to Keep them Busy—The Ideal Pen

Chickens that are penned up should have their houses cleaned out twice a week at least, and their runs dug up (to loosen the earth) once a week, which enables them to have a little exercise in the way of scratching. Their morning meal should consist of potato meal and all scraps from the table, boiled down and thickened, after draining well, with barley meal, with a dash of pepper in, and when cooled down, given; their water vessels washed and filled. For mid-day meal, a good size cabbage, hung to allow them to peck at it, and high enough for them to reach at, which keeps them busy for some considerable time, and, for change, a swede which is very good, too. For their last meal give barley, a little wheat, or darry, and occasionally, small Indian corn. A box kept in the run, with all fine ashes saved from the house on washing days, if sifted well, gives them a bath. A handful of peppercorns thrown in to them about once a month helps to keep them in good condition, and their houses should be lime-washed occasionally.

A GALLANT CORNET

Sir George Wombwell, who recently celebrated his golden wedding, is probably best remembered for his gallantry in the Valley of Death at Balaclava. In the memorable charge, though he was not on duty with the 17th Lancers, in which he was a cornet, and extra gallanter to Lord Cardigan, he rode on the right flank. Twice he had his mounts shot from under him, but he went to within a hundred yards of the terrible batteries unscathed.

TEA FOR CHINESE EMPEROR

Tea for the Emperor of China is grown in a garden surrounded by very high walls, so that none but the cultivators can approach it. The pickers must bathe three times daily. They must wear special gloves, and abstain from eating fish lest their breath should spoil the aroma of the tea leaves.

REV. C. L. BILKEY REMEMBERED BY ST. PAUL'S CHURCH A.Y.P.A.

Last evening about forty of the members of the St. Paul's A.Y.P.A. Association gathered at the home of Mr. Johnson at the corner of Sussex and Glenelg-sts to present Rev. C. H. Bilkey, the active retiring president of the league with an address and gift of remembrance as he will leave shortly to take the rectorship of the Anglican church at Alliston.

In a neatly worded address, read by Miss E. Twomey, Mr. Bilkey was presented on behalf of the Association with a handsome black leather, initialed, travelling bag.

Mr. Bilkey was taken entirely by surprise, and in a few well chosen words thanked the members of the association for their kindness and stated that in his new parish, he would always remember the members of the A.Y.P.A. He went on to say that he was very sorry to leave town, but that he saw in Alliston a lot of work to be done, and he thought it best to go.

Rev. Canon Marsh then spoke a few words stating, how he greatly regretted the departure of Mr. Bilkey from Lindsay, and wishing him every success in his future parish.

Mr. Johnson, the host of the evening expressed his regret at the departure of Mr. Bilkey from town, and although he left Lindsay, he would always hold a warm place in the hearts of the members of the A.Y.P.A.

Mr. Harry Reid, the new president of the Association, then stated how sorry he was to see Mr. Bilkey leave town. He stated that while in Lindsay, Mr. Bilkey had made many friends who would regret his departure as much as he (the president) did, but as he knew that Mr. Bilkey was leaving to take up a parish of his own in Alliston he thought that it would be for the good of the church, and he wished him every success in his new field of labor.

While in Lindsay Mr. Bilkey has done a great deal to further the social intercourse of the members of the A.E.P.A., of which he was the President and had afforded the members many a pleasant evening.

In the work of the church Mr. Bilkey was a splendid worker, visiting the sick, and doing all in his power to loyally uphold and retain the standard of Christ.

During the evening, Mr. T. Murtagh, rendered two delightful solos, which were highly appreciated by all present.

Games of various kinds were then indulged in and a pleasant social time spent, after which refreshment were served.

At the conclusion of the evening, a hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mr. and Mrs. Johnson for the excellent manner in which they entertained the young people.

THE ADDRESS.

Dear Mr. Bilkey:—

When it was noised abroad that you were about to sever your connections with St. Paul's, many were the expressions of regret heard on all sides, not only from the people of our own congregation but from many others.

Though you will, be greatly missed in all departments of church work, yet, perhaps, the A.Y.P.A. will feel your loss most keenly. It was mainly through your instrumentality, that we as a society, were called into existence, and we owe it to you to a great extent, the measure of success that we have achieved.

Will you accept this club bag as a slight token of our appreciation of the many hours of thought and work you have devoted to our welfare and of your unflinching cheerfulness and interest, which have made the hours we have spent together, so pleasant and profitable?

In conclusion we wish you and your family a happy joyous Christmas tide and we trust and pray that your efforts in your new field of labor, may in the future, be crowned with every blessing.

Signed on behalf of the Society:

H. J. Reid, Pres.

F. J. Fee.

STORE OF DUNDAS & FLAVELLES LTD.

The following original essay was written by Watson Kirkconnell, aged 15, in connection with the competition held by the firm of Dundas & Flavelles, on the occasion of their recent fiftieth anniversary. Master Kirkconnell won first prize:

"On the corner of Kent and York-sts., stands the large, massive store of Dundas & Flavelles. Even from a distance it looms up strong, well-made, and substantial. From the graceful lines of the roof to the broad cement sidewalk the whole structure appears, a good model of business architecture, for it is utterly without the ugliness which often results from the quick, utilitarian methods of the modern day, and possesses a world of quiet dignity in its simple design.

The whole building is of red brick, and is built in three stories. All along the front on the ground floor extend huge, plate glass windows, through whose polished faces we catch a glimpse of the fairyland within. On entering at the front door during the busy Christmas season, one is struck by the gay scene into which he is plunged. All across the room, from the rows of posts which support the ceiling, hang long, graceful festoons of tissue paper. Here and there Christmas bells are attached by cords to the ceiling, and to cap all, several caged canaries trill cheerily from their perches. To the right and centre are long counters, shelves and tables, with a multitudinous variety of feminine fineries, knick-knacks, and those articles known only to that sex. Dainty shirt waists, divers colored ribbons, and alluring fabrics of all sizes and colors attract the would-be purchasers, and all wants are promptly attended to by the obliging and pretty clerks.

To the left, almost hidden by a great partition of boxes, is the Men's Department. Here, along the front, are hats and caps of the latest style from the splendid Haves von Gal headwear to the small neat caps for the boys of the Collegiate Institute. Heavy tables, heaped up with suits, stretch up to the rear, and for cupboards and dressing rooms a long row of glass closets stand along the west wall.

In the northern section of the ground floor, but on a slightly higher level, we find the fur department and the office of the establishment. In the former is a fine array of muffs, overcoats and furs of all kinds. Large mirrors are advantageously situated so that the customers can pose and see to the best effect the "hang" of their purchases. Here, too, all is decorated and abounding in the Xmas spirit. Palms are everywhere, and a piano delights the ear with popular music. The office is a fine, up-to-date room with all modern conveniences. It is centrally situated in the store and so can keep a guiding eye over the whole building.

Mount the stairs which go up near the office and you will find yourself on a narrow landing between the carpet and millinery departments. In the latter is spread out such an exhibit of creations that a man feels dizzy gazing at the multiplicity of designs, increased as they are by the reflections from the great mirrors at the sides. All unmindful of the beauty of the room, numerous women are "trying on" their winter hats and attempting to discover which style is most becoming to their own peculiar types of beauty. A door in the corner leads to a small, airy Cobalt work room, which is built on the roof. In this the manufacture of hats is being carried on.

The carpet department is a long, narrow room, plentifully stocked with material. Huge rolls of Brussels carpets line the walls, and with window blinds, damask curtains and rugs, of all sorts, form a most enticing display. Adjoining this is the dress making department an airy place with hardwood woodwork, and handsomely papered walls and ceilings. If an adventurous spirit leads you to mount another flight of stairs, you discover a large spacious room devoted to the work of the carpet department. Even here everything is up-to-date and no slovenliness can be observed anywhere.

Thus we find that from the ground floor to the attic the building is up-to-date, commodious and attractive. Its clerks are always obliging; its stock is extensive, varied and select. Their name is a by-word throughout the town and surrounding district for honesty, courtesy and excellence in goods. Cases might even be cited where sons and grandsons of early customers have continued to trade with them. Yet, though they continue to be the same old, reliable firm from

Thinking of Building a Silo?

Better Build it

of Concrete

THE construction of a Silo affords an excellent example of what the farmer can do with Concrete—and of the superiority of Concrete over all other material for various structural work about the farm.

The usual wooden silo, besides being expensive, is far from satisfactory. In the first place, it does not endure; and, more important still—being far from weather-proof—its contents become water-logged—producing an unsanitary condition.

A Silo built of Concrete, on the other hand, is practically everlasting—it is proof against heat, cold and moisture—and it has the merit of comparative economy.

This economy feature is further explained in our free book—"What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete."—which tells how to mix and use Concrete for the making of silos and other buildings on the farm.
