MARY McNABB
The death of Mary McNabb, relict of the late Duncan McNabb of Eldon, which occurred on Oct. 20th, at the ripe age of 89 years, has removed one who was highly respected and had a large circle of friends in that locality. The deceased was an active and consistent member of the Presbyterian church. She leaves to mourn her loss three sons and three daughters, Duncan in Dakota, Peter in Alberta, Alexander in Eldon, and Misses Effie and Annie at home and Mrs. Wm. Foreman, of Eldon.

Ice on Sturgeon Lake
Sturgeon Lake had a thin sheet of ice over it two or three days ago but Tuesday's mild weather opened the water again. The ice is particularly late in forming this year. There were a number of Sturgeon Point people in town at the Xmas Fair, but they had to come by way of Fenelon Falls.

IMMIGRATION NTO ONTARIO INCREASES

Half as Large Again as Last Year

Almost 62,000 immigrants settled this year in Ontario, bringing into the country cash estimated at $315,000. The total number this year is almost 20,000 larger than the preceding year, and according to the reports received from the European agents, it is expected that the even for the coming year will be even greater.

Following are the monthly figures for the two years:

Table with columns for months (January to December) and years (1913 and 1912) showing immigrant numbers.

The figures show that about 75 per cent of the settlers were British subjects, while the remainder were from other European countries. Of these the majority were Germans, Russian Jews and Scandinavians. A noticeable feature is that during the year there were but a small number of immigrants from the Balkan States.

HIGH CLASS SETTLERS

It is estimated that Toronto received fully 25 per cent of the total number, and that over 50 per cent have settled on farms, while the remainder have scattered throughout the various cities and towns of the province. The latter and those who settled in Toronto are principally mechanics and factory workers.

All were well supplied with capital, with the exception of those coming from the East London district, and I roughly estimate that the amount of money brought into Ontario this year by the British immigrants would average $50 per head, including men, women and children.

The fact that all succeeded in making a good living was shown by the fact that during the year the Government did not have to pay out $50 to assist any of the immigrants.

INDETERMINATE TERM EXPLAINED

Legislation With Tendency in Right Direction

Honour Judge Deroche, of Belleville, in addressing the Grand Jury at the opening of the County Court and General Sessions, spoke as follows in reference to a new law in regard to the imprisonment of criminals.

Members of the Jury—Before directing your attention to the two questions which you will have to consider in this court, I want to draw your attention to a new law we have in regard to the imprisonment of criminals.

It is practically through you only that we send information of this sort throughout the county, and it seems to me this is sufficiently important that I should give it to you so you may know it, and through you many of our county may know it also. It is in my opinion a valuable piece of legislation, and while not going all the way, it is in the right direction.

Heretofore when a criminal was found guilty of a charge, the judge was compelled to sentence that criminal to whatever length of time he thought wise, either to the Central Prison, the penitentiary or the common gaol. There has been a growing feeling for a long time amongst many men that that system could be improved upon, by the Judge merely sentencing the prisoner to whatever prison he thought wise and leave it with the head of the prison perhaps, or with a body of men appointed by the Government for that purpose, to decide how long he should stay there. The advantage in that is this: Those prison authorities, or whoever might have charge of it, after the prisoner arrives, have plenty of time to make full inquiries as to that man's birth, family, bringing up, possibilities, his past record—all these things—and they should know all these things before they can well say how long a man should stay in prison. I remember, I think four or five years ago, one of the High Court Judges addressing the Grand Jury in this court room on this question, explaining his view about it, and telling of the agitation to bring about that result.

Something was done last June. On the 6th June a new law came into force. I will read the clause: "Every court in the Province of Ontario, before which any person is convicted for an offence against the laws of Canada, punishable by imprisonment in the common gaol for the term of three months or for any longer time, may sentence such person to imprisonment for a term of not less than three months and for an indeterminate period thereafter of not more than two years less one day in the Ontario Reformatory (heretofore called the Central Prison) instead of the common gaol of the county or judicial district where the offence was committed or was tried.

Central Prison it is possible now for a judge to sentence him for not less than three months and not more than two years less a day.

We have taken advantage of that statute once or twice already in this county. For instance the young man Deshane; I suppose you read about him in the newspaper, getting away from the gaol just after being sentenced; he had been sentenced in that way. I think the newspaper reported that he had been sentenced for three months, but that was not accurate; the sentence was, not less than three months and not more than two years less a day, and it might be anywhere between these two, depending upon the prison authorities at Toronto. The sentence as given in the newspaper might be very misleading.

I have taken advantage of this and I thought it wise to mention it to you this afternoon, that you might know it, and others might know it as well.

Police Court

A drunk and incapable picked up on the street last night appeared before Magistrate Jackson this morning in police court. The penalty was one dollar and costs.
