REV. F. H. M'INTOSH INDUCTED AS PASTOR OF ST. ANDREW'S

A huge congregation was present Thursday night at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church at the induction of Rev. F. H. McIntosh as the new pastor of the congregation. The ceremony, which is a very interesting one, commenced at seven o'clock and continued till about nine, when the congregation was invited to the school room to enjoy themselves socially and partake of light refreshments which were served by the ladies of the church.

PASTOR INTRODUCED

Rev. Mr. McIntosh met and shook hands with the members of his flock as they filed through from the church to the school room. Elders A. Jackson, J. R. McNeillie and Robt. Ross introduced each person to Rev. McIntosh as they came up. It was fine to see the quick bond of sympathetic interest which has sprung up so quickly between the congregation and its new minister, whose magnetic influence already began to be felt. The expressions of pleasure at having so fine a man in Rev. Mr. McIntosh were widespread among the congregation and its adherents.

The ceremony of induction in the earlier part of the evening gave one a far greater realization of the cares and responsibilities of a minister's life and of the duty the congregation owe themselves, their pastor and the furtherance of their Master's work by co-operation with and proper appreciation of the minister's efforts.

DR. CURRIE'S ADDRESS

Rev. Dr. Curry, of Beaverton, preached the sermon of the evening, taking his text from the forty-first chapter of Isaiah, sixth verse. "It was in the early ages of the world's history that the value of co-operation was discovered," said Dr. Curry. Specializing brings men together, makes men more necessary to one another. Co-ordination is necessary for the best interest of mankind between the family, the school, the church, business and industry. Neither can do the work nor take the place of any of the others, yet all are linked in one great organism. Sixty years ago it was a simpler matter, man's own muscle or his horse's muscle supplied nearly all the average family needed. Even the clothing was made in the home from homespun cloth. Today the factory has driven this industry out of the home. Steam and electricity, the muscles of the Almighty, have largely brought this about.

These conditions require us to bear one another's burdens and share one another's sufferings as never before in the history of the world. The state is becoming a great fraternal organization, and man combines in fraternal and insurance societies that in time of need he may help or be helped by his brother. This complex life is not easier but better. The steam engine of today, the organ, battleship and intricate mechanisms demand better trained men than the old days produced.

This is true also of social and religious life. Here is where redemption comes in. The unifying and releasing power of the life of Jesus Christ will glorify every life. No life is unimportant, each has a place in the great organism.

Men attempting to work together have failed because of the absence of one thing—the unifying power. The pulpit requires courage, for there are many discouragements. There is a way of helping without giving money. The world is hungry for this, for encouragement, for appreciation and for sympathy.

Jesus in his darkest hour had boundless courage. How much more have we grounds for courage today, with the hopeful outlook that is ours. All is well. The Son of God who leads us, knows most and sees farthest, as in the watch tower, and knows that right will triumph. Dr. Curry pleaded for a close understanding and co-operation between the minister and congregation.

MODERATOR'S PRAYER

Rev. Fraser, of Uxbridge, Moderator of the Presbytery, then led in prayer. "Thy Spirit brought this man to Thy work. Thy Spirit gathered this congregation together and caused them to build this fine church, this modern Sunday School and to carry on Thy work here. Thy Spirit brought these two, the church and this man together from afar off. Give him now the joy of his work, and the welcome of his people. Let him feel that he is working among friends. Let wisdom and strength and fearlessness bless him in his work. Bless the congregation. Let this be a new era, brighter and better than ever before."

THE NEW PASTOR

The Post desires to join with the citizens, irrespective of religious affiliations, in extending a cordial welcome to Rev. F. H. McIntosh, the new pastor of St. Andrew's church, as well as congratulate the congregation in having as its ministerial head a gentleman of high scholarly attainments. His ministry in the Master's vineyard has been characterized by deep religious zeal and earnestness and high character of manhood. Those who heard Mr. McIntosh on the occasion of his first visit to Lindsay were impressed with the sincerity and deep religious fervor which marked his sermons. As a pulpit orator he is powerful and impressive. May his ministerial career be productive of great blessings to the congregation and the community as a whole.

RIGHT HAND OF FELLOWSHIP.

Rev. Mr. McIntosh then arose and before the congregation was given the right hand of fellowship by the ministers of the Presbytery, those present being Rev. Dr. Currie, of Beaverton; Rev. Bryden, of Woodville; Rev. Walker, of Kinmount; Rev. McKay, of Wick; Rev. Graham, of Lorneville, and Rev. Fraser, of Uxbridge Moderator of the Presbytery.

REV. MCKAY'S ADDRESS

Rev. W. A. McKay, of Wick, then gave an excellent address to the new minister on his new duties as a priest, prophet and pastor. Rev. McKay said he must have the finest qualities of manhood when called upon at the baptisms of a child and other ceremonies through life, and at his parishioners and their God on their death beds. He must know humanity and he must know God. Many of us understand humanity and fail miserably when we come to deal with God.

He must be a true prophet, but there was never a time in the history of the world when the people were as willing as they are today to listen to a true prophet, but he must have the qualifications. He must rip open fearlessly the sins and shams of the age. He owes it to himself and his people to take time to withdraw and brood over the great problems in order to come forth with a message. He could not be expected to speak every night in the week about little things, and then have a real message to deliver on Sunday. It is better to let the little worries go and to prepare as a prophet. Said the speaker, "You must know your people. If we knew the hopes and aims and aspirations of the faces in front of us how we would preach."

REV. MR. BRYDEN.

Rev. Bryden, of Woodville, then addressed the congregation on its duties toward its pastor. "Ministers," said he, "have their likes and dislikes. It is dangerous to give our innermost thoughts. Then the speaker mentioned the different estimates that are made of a minister by a congregation. He contended that it was impossible for a minister to be a good man, but not a good preacher. The greatest message that any man speaks is that which is back of the word and is not spoken.

It is impossible to be a good preacher and not to be a good man. The minister cannot live in the fellowship of the Master and not express it in his life to the people. Your minister needs appreciation. Appreciation is necessary for any minister to be able to go on. Even Christ needed appreciation when he was upon earth. The appreciation he wants is to find that there is a growing desire to know and feed upon the things of God in his congregation. This counts more than multitudes in the church every Sunday. This is the thing that blesses his work and himself. It involves on the part of the congregation an openness of mind and a heart willing to receive the truth.

If you give your minister the appreciation of which I speak you will make his message from Sunday to Sunday and you will make your church too. A telegram was then read from Rev. Jas. Wallace, who recently gave up St. Andrew's pulpit to engage in missionary work. It was dated Kingston. "Heartly congratulations to minister and congregation on a happy settlement." Signed, Jas. Wallace.

A profound hush fell over the congregation during the reading of the telegram. Rev. Wallace's thought of his late congregation and his successor was greatly appreciated.
The service closed with the hearty singing of "Blest be the Tie that Binds."
