COPYRIGHT, 1901, BY THOMAS P. MONTFORT

(Continued from last week.) Without another word Hicks led the way to the cellar, and there, sure enough, they found Ebenezer, the brave and the bold, buried under a mass of potatoes which had rolled down over him when he had attempted

Was Last Soon Verterday Me He looked sheepish and cheap when he was hauled out, and when the men laughed at him he was in half a mind to get angry, but he thought better of

to secrete himself by burrowing into

It and grinned instead. "Your woman 'lowed you war gwine to fine the war," Pap Sampson said, with a smile, "but we uns reckoned you warn't hurtin so bad as all that to whup no battles, an it looks like wo ons war right."

"I-I did start to jine the war," Ebenezer stammered, "but how could I git to go any fudder when I done got kotched under them derned ta-

"Did you 'low the war had done thar lookin round 'mong them taters for a battle to when?"

Theneger grinned, but made no reply, His wife, however, who had come just in time to hear Pap's question, recken, Pap Sampson, you all thinks you uns is powerful smart. My land, didn't none of you uns never start nowhar an git lost on the way? Humph! Like as if Ebenezer couldn't 'a' fell into that cellar or got sort of rattled an run into it by mistake! Reckon the next thing you all 'ill be tryin to make out that Ebenezer are coward."

"Lord, Mis'us Sparks, we don't need to do nary sich a thing as that," Pap Sampson replied promptly. "Ebeneser has done made that all out as plain as the nose on your face hisself. Yes, sir-ee."

"Guess Ebenezer an Sim Banks has done showed jest how brave they are,' Jason Roberts observed, with a laugh. "One of 'em a-hidin in a cellar an the other'n tearin down the road lippetyelippety, an all on account of a drove of old cows. Say, I bet the war'd soon be fit if they uns had a whack at it." "Lord! Wouldn't it, though?" Pap said, with a chuckle. "Why, it'd jest be whupped all to frazzles in no time." Then everybody laughed-everybody, except Sparks and Banks and their wives. The two first hung their heads in shame, Mrs. Sparks bristled up in her husband's defense, while Mrs. Banks gave her husband a look full of disgust and coolly turned her back on

Mrs. Mann noticed the conduct of Mrs. Banks and promptly called attention to it by saying:

"Lord, Loueesy, you ain't nigh so quick to stand up for your husband as Betty Sparks is for her'n. You acts for all the world jest like you is plumb ashamed of Sim."

"I am," Mrs. Banks replied flatly. "Who could help being ashamed of a coward, I'd like to know?" Sim looked up at his wife, a pained expression in his eyes and his face very "Loueesy," he gasped, "you dast to that a-way about me an we uns jest been married a year?" "I dare to speak the truth," Mrs.

Banks replied cuttingly, her lips curling with scorn. "I'm plumb ashamed of you." "Then you don't love me none," Sim whimpered broken heartedly. "A wife what loves her old man ain't goin to run him down afore other folks. Loueesy, you don't love me; you don't love Mrs. Banks, instead of being touched, gave her husband one scornful glance and turned and walked away. With her utter want of tact Mrs. Mann said:

"I guess, Sim Banks, Loueesy's been a-contrastin you with that Mr. Melvin, an I reckon she thinks you ain't much shakes compared with him."

Sim's eyes flashed fire in an instant, and, trembling with anger, he cried:

"You are a-lyin, Mrs. Mann, when you say any sich a thing as that, an if you was a man I'd whup you till your hide wouldn't hold shucks. Hain't nobody got no call to speak pary a word ag'in Loueesy, an I ain't goin to stand still an let no sich a word be spoke. That's jest what I got to say, an I mean it." the old man was totally unaware o

Mrs. Mann sniffed contemptuously. Melvin's presence even. "Sim Banks," she said, "you kin jest Becoming desperate, Melvin drew stand up for Loueesy all you pleases, closer still and, raising his voice to its but I mind she didn't stand up for you highest pitch, shouted: none, an my notion is she hain't goin "Are you deaf?" to stand up for you, no matter what There was a momentary silence. Then anybody says. I've got eyes, an what slowly the old fellow raised his head I see I see, Loueesy was plumb struck and, looking Melvin over calmly and with that man, an you mark my words, deliberately from head to foot and Sim Banks, if she ever gits to know. back again, said quietly: him she'll learn to love his little finger "Young feller, air you a-sp'ilin for i better than she'll ever love your whole body. You jest bear them words in Melvin started back and opened his mind, Sim Banks, an if you live you will find that they are the gospel truth." Mrs. Mann, though actuated by a selfish interest and influenced by that feeling of bitter enmity which a woman has for a successful rival in the affections of the man she loves, spoke nearer the truth than any of her hearers dreamed-nearer even than she herself supposed. strings an thar ain't a piece left of CHAPTER III. TOPE SEEKING INFORMATION. 49 James Melvin was in no very pleasant humor to begin with.

Since early morning he had been in the saddle, and for 12 long hours he had followed the tortuous course of a dimly marked road which wound unwilling to direct me so that I can find certainly up and down and in and out 'it." among the rugged bills that border the Missouri river.

His assertion that the horse he rode possessed a gait like that of a cow was not an exaggeration, and neither was that other assertion, that he was hungrier than a bear. He had eaten nothing since early morning, and his breakfast, secured at a log cabin back in the commodate people?" hills, had not been anything like as sumptuous as he could have desired.

And now, on top of these discomforts, rect me to the road?" James Melvin had suddenly awakened to a realization of the fact that he was ment. Then, straightening himself up, lost - lost, with night and darkness he said: coming on and nothing to guide him . are gwine to keep on a-foolin around

Since leaving Beckett's Mill he had traveled the main road for a short distance, then had turned off to follow a nat'rally light in on you an give you path that led up a ridge through a the allfiredest wust lickin ever anyretched clean to Hicks' cellar," Pap | dark, heavy forest. For a time he got on very well, but by and by he came to having nothing to further guide him he began to ramble about the wood in an uncertain manner. This he continued for an hour before he discovered that he was merely wandering around and around, and it dawned on him that felt that he must gain some information from the old man if possible, even

He reined up his horse to consider his situation and to try to decide what at the risk of getting a fight on his he had better do under the circumstances. He found that reining up his | horse was the easiest thing he had ating on, and I can't think of spending tempted that day. The animal may have possessed other strong points, but the speed with which he came to a halt in that case why don't you git out of was certainly far the strongest. it, then?"

While Melvin sat there puzzling over his situation, unable to decide which way to turn, his attention was attracted by a noise which came from a point just beyond a clump of trees. That noise sounded like some one coughing, and it brought a thrill of joy and a ray of hope to Melvin's weary soul. house had been lost."

Getting his horse in motion as soon as possible and after some effort, he rode forward until he had passed the trees. There, sitting on a log, with his elbows resting on his knees and his face in his hands, was an old man who had every appearance of being a native of Possum Ridge.

Melvin was glad to see the old fellow, for he had no doubt that he would easily gain from him the information necessary to guide him to a place of refuge for the night. It must be reain't keerin a durn whar you spend the membered that Melvin was a total stranger to Possum Ridge and to the an you can jest stop whar you darn manners and peculiarities of its people. Had he not been he would have the best thing you can do is to git. You been far less sanguine of the prospect have picked an nagged at me long the discovery of the old man opened up. Approaching to within speaking dis-

Melvin was glad to see the old fellow.

tion. To his surprise, the other took no

Still no reply and no movement on Thinking the old man must be hard of hearing, Melvin advanced nearer yet and, raising his voice almost to a shout,

"Pretty rough country around here

No reply, and not even so much as the stir of a hand or foot. Apparently notice. Approaching still nearer, h

"A pleasant evening," he said.

the part of the other.

eyes wide in astonishment.

"why do you ask that?"

lice of Melvin's question.

"Of course not."

by asking such things?"

"Why, no," he stammered presently;

"Are you achin to be chawed up?"

the old man continued, taking no no-

"Are you wantin to be larruped around here among these saplin's till your hide's wore plumb into fiddle

"Certainly not. What do you mean

"Are you pinin for me to take you by the heels an-thrash the bushes off of s

you big enough to balt a fishbook?"

enough, an I ain't a-gwine to stand much more of your foolin." tance, Melvin passed the usual saluta-"And you won't direct me to a"-"It ain't my business to direct you to nothin. You ain't got me hired for no sich a purpose."

"But you"-"You git!"

The old man rose to his feet and started forward, his eyes gleaming with anger. Melvin scented serious trouble and put spurs to his horse and moved on.

"I almost wish now," he said to himself, "that I had taken the chances and stopped at Beckett's Mill. It would be no worse to run a little risk there than it is to sleep out in these woods and go without food. O God, if I could just recall that one act which shadows all my life I'd give the world!"

CHAPTER IV. THE TENDER PASSION.

There were three very thoughtful and serious people at Beckett's Mill that night. They were Mr. and Mrs. Banks and Mrs. Mann. The rest of the population, both men and women, collected in little groups, either at a neighbor's house or on the street, and discussed the war and the events of that day. But those three remained aloof, their thoughts centered on things of far more interest to themselves. Mrs. Banks had never felt at home among the people of Possum Ridge, at least never since she had spent a year away at college. She knew that as a class they were good people and well meaning, but for all that she did not like them, and it was not because she did not wish to like them, but because she could not. The whole trouble was that she and they were not congenial spirits and there was nothing in common between them. Unfortunately she felt toward her husband as she felt toward the rest. He was like them, and try as she would she could not separate him from them. She found between herself and him that same feeling of restraint, not to say antagonism, which held her aloof from the others. Instead of his presence affording her that feeling of sweet companionship which a wife should find in the company of her husband, it annoyed and irritated her and made her restless and unhappy. She had married Sim when she was a mere child. She had liked him then, and she had believed that she loved him. She had attended school with him, and in his rough way he had always been kind to her, treating her with more consideration than she had ever received from any one else. At the age of 15 she received an offer of marriage from Sim, and, urged on by her parents, she had accepted him. Then came the year at college and a few months later the wedging.

couple of acres of ground with your

"No. But why"-

ever, be sald:

found it"

ness whether I'm deaf or not?"

full minute before he recovered sufficiently to make a reply. At last, how-

"I am sorry if I have offended you.

and I beg your pardon. I meant no barm, I assure you. I-I have lost the

"Waal, s'pose you have. I ain't

"I thought you might be able and

"Am I anywise responsible for your

"Then it bain't none of my duty to

"Don't you ever do anything to ac-

"And you won't even so much as di-

The old man was silent for a mo-

"I see jest how it are, stranger. You here an chawin on the rag till my dander'll begin to rise, an then I'll Jest

Melvin drew back from the old man and eyed him curiously. He didn't tnow what to make of such strange senduct, and he thought the man must be crazy. Had his situation been less desperate he would have passed on without waiting to exchange another word, but under the circumstances he hands. So he made one more effort.

the night here in this wood."

"I would if you'd direct me."

waited a moment, then added:

"You know what I mean."

"Mebby I could."

"Don't have to."

much for a stranger."

"Well, why don't you?"

"Say," he began, "darkness is com-

"Can't you?" the other said. "Waal,

The native remained silent. Melvin

"I say, won't you open your heart

just a little and tell me where I can "Find it anywhere you blame please for all of me. Fust I knowed any

"Reckon you mean what you say."

house where I can spend the night?"

"I mean can't you direct me to a

"No, but you certainly ought to be accommodating enough to do that

"Mebby I ought, but the fact is I night. The whole world's afore you, please. Now you have heard me, an got in all this world."

"Did I cause you to lose it?"

help you to find it, I reckon."

"I 'tend to my own business."

"Certainly not."

Then there came an awakening of "Then what you mean by comin which she had never dreamed-a sad, a-foolin around me this a-way? Think bitter awakening that was like a cruel I'm a derned fool an don't know nothcrucifixion. She realized that to make in? Reckon I don't know it's a nice marriage sacred and happy there must day? Reckon I don't know it's a rough be mutual love, and she knew that on country? Reckon it's anybody's busiher part there was none, and she felt that the time would never come when Melvin was so surprised at the old there would be. man's words and manner that It was a Sitting alone in her room that night, she folded her arms on the table and, pillowing her head on them, wept as though her heart would break. She had known many unhappy hours, but never any so thoroughly miserable as

She felt toward ber husband as she had never felt before. Often and often she had experienced a feeling of dislike for some trait of his character, but it was not until now that she felt that she hated the man himself. There had been many times when his absence was a relief to her, but it was never until this night that she had wished with all her heart that she might never see him again.

That James Melvin had much to do with her feelings she could not belp but admit, although the admission caused her face to burn with shame. The knowledge that another man, and that man at that, could be the means of making ber despise ber busband was bitterly humiliating, and she wished with all her heart that she could dispise Melvin as well; but, alas, that was something she could not do.

While she sat there Sim came into the room. It was late, and he had walked two miles out into the country and back. He was restless and oneasy and far more unhappy than he had ever been in all his life.

Mrs. Mann's prophecy, coupled wit the words Louisa had spoken, had made a much deeper impression on him than he would have admitted to any living soul, than he even liked to admit

That there was something lacking his married life he knew only too well and he had known it from his wedding day, but never until now had it oc curred to him how serious that lacking might be. That Louisa did not love him as a wife should he had been long assured, but the possibility of her loving another man was something that had never crossed his mind until this day, and the bare thought of such a thing fell on him with a crushing blow.

"Great God!" he cried aloud as he tramped the lonely country road. "Such a thing cannot, must not, shall not be! It would kill me. O God, it would kill

When he entered the room, Louisa did not look up, and when he spoke her name she paid no attention to him. He walted a moment, then asked her what was the matter. "Nothing," she replied between her

"Then what are you cryin for?" he

"Nothing," she answered again. "Is it anything I've done?" he ques-

"Is it what Mary Mann said?" "Then what is it?"

"Nothing."

"But it is somethin, Loueesy. You know it is. Won't you tell me what?" She shook her head. "Did you hear what Mary Mann said this evenin down there on the street?" he asked. She shook her head again, "She said you didn't love me an that if ever you got to know that stranger you'd love his little finger better than you love my whole body. Do you know what I told her?"

"Well, I give ber a settler, I guess for once. I said, 'Miss Mann, you are a-lyin when you say any sich a thing as that, an if you was a man I'd whup you till your hide wouldn't hold shucks.' Them's the very words I said to her, an I meant 'em too."

He paused as if expecting his wife to speak, but she remained silent. He hoped that she would be pleased with him for speaking so strongly in her defense, and he felt hurt when she took no notice of his words. Presently he went on, saying: "Them was hard things you said about me down there today, Loueesy, an I'd never 'a' thought you'd 'a' done it. I guess, though, you didn't mean it. did you?"

"Do you want me to tell you a lie?" she asked in turn. "No, of course not."

"Then you'd better not ask such ques-

"You did mean it, then?" She hesitated a moment, then said: "If I hadn't meant it, I wouldn't have said it. Now I hope you're sat-Sim was thoughtfully silent for almost a minute. Then he said slowly: "I know it was cowardly for me to act like I done, a-runnin from them cattle. But, Lord a-mighty, how was I to know they was cattle 'stead of soldlers when I didn't look back to see what they was?" "Why didn't you look back instead of charging up there the way you did and making such a spectacle as you did of yourself? Of course I was ashamed of you. How could I help "Humph! It's all mighty fine to talk that a-way as long as you ain't never been in my place. I guess that Mr. Melvin, with all his grand an mighty airs, wouldn't 'a' done no different hisself even if you do think he's so Louisa raised her head and fixed her eyes on Sim. There was an expression in her face and a look in her eyes that | two. I oughtn't to have said it, but were new to him, and they caused him | since I have said it I ain't goin to take to shrink away from her and look on her with a feeling of fear. "Sim Banks," she said, "you be careful what you say, for I positively will not bear to be insulted by you. I'll submit to what Mary Mann may say, because I can't help myself, but you attempt to say such things and I'll leave you in a minute and never live with you again. Is your opinion of me so poor that you think I am going to fall in love with every man that comes "No: I never said anything about you fallin in love with anybody." "Don't you insinuate anything of the kind either. It will be time enough for you to accuse me of thinking that man great when I have said or done some thing to give you a reason for doing it. but not before. You continue to say such things as that to me, and I'll hate

She wept as though her heart would break you with my whole heart and despise rou so long as I live."

She arose and swept out of the room leaving Sim dumb with astonishment. It was the first time in her life that she had ever shown such spirit as that, and he did not know what to make of it. Still, he was more rejoiced than angered by her words, for he reasoned that they proved conclusively that she had not been struck by Metvin's appearance and that there was no probability of Mrs. Mann's prediction coming two

Almost light hearted he went out on the street and walked up and down in the cool night air. He had been walking so for a quarter of an hour when in passing a house he heard his name called softly. He stopped and looked around, and a woman stepped out can make such use of as you see fit.

"You done Loucesy a great wrong." the shadow of a tree and stood leaning over a fence near him. It was Mrs. Mann, and, looking up into his face, she smiled sweetly.

"Sim," she said, with a pretty air of penitence, "I am sorry that I said anything today to make you mad at me, an I hope you'll forgive me. Won't you, please?"

Sim hesitated for a moment, then

"You done Loueesy a great wrong, Mrs. Mann"-"Don't call me that, Sim," she interrupted. "Don't you know I despise that name?" "Do you? Why?"

"If you was a woman an had to bear the name of somebody you didn't love, you'd know why."

"Didn't you love your husband?" "You know I didn't." "How should I know that?"

"You ought to know that a woman never loves but one man." "An in your case Dick Mann wasn't that one?" "Who was it?

Mrs. Mann blushed and acted confused and finally stole a sly glance at Sim's face that ought to have told him the whole story. But he was thinking of something else and looking in another direction, so the effect of that smile and that glance was to a great extent lost.

"You ought to know that without askin," she said demurely. "Maybe I ought, but I don't, an seckon it don't make no difference no

"No, I reckon it don't, not to you anyway," with a sad sigh. "But you'll call me Mary, won't you, Sim?" "Why, I guess so, if you're very particular about it. It don't make any difference to me." "It does to me. It makes all the difference in the world what you call me. It don't matter about anybody else,

"Well, I'll call you Mary, then." "Thank you. An now, Sim, you ain't goin to be mad at me any more, are "No, I guess I won't be mad at you but you done Loueesy wrong. You had no right to say that about that stran-

"No, I hadn't, Sim. I know that now. But I can't bear to hear you talked about the way you was, an I felt I jest had to take Loueesy down a peg or no backwater. Loueesy don't love you, an she never will love you, but as certain as my name's Mary Mann she'll fall in love with that Melvin if she ever gits to know him."

"I don't believe it. While ago she got as mad as a wet ben 'cause I said somethin bout her thinkin him great

(To be Continued)

ASTHMA GURE FREE

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent Cure in All Cases

SENT ABSOLUTELY FREE ON RECEIPT OF POSTAL WRITE YOUR NAME AND ADDRESS PLAINLY.

DR. TAFF BROS. MEDCINE Co.

DR. TAFF BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Yours respectfully,

Home address, 235 Rivington street.

There is nothing like Asthmo lene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

in the out kid

will pos ing the dissolve

the bloc

kidneys

LINDS

Much

en in t tor of

Mr. T.

BOUNT !

gratula

Burvey

Outario

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge Ill., says : "Your trial bottle of Asthmale received in good condition . cannot w you how thankful I feel for the good deri ed from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for years. I despaired of ever being cured. eaw your advertisement for the ours of the dreadful and tormerting disease, Asthm and thought you had overspoken yourselve. but resolved to give it a trial. To me astonishment, the trial acted like a chan Send me a full size bottle."

Rev. Dr. Morris Wechsler. Rabbi of the Cong. Bnai Israel. NEW YORK, Jan. 3, 1901 DES. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO.,

Gentlemen: Your Asthmalene is and cellent remedy for Asthma and Hay Fere and its composition alleviates all trouble which combine with Asthma. Its success astonishing and wonderful.

After having it carefully analyzed, we can state that Asthmalene contains to opin morphine, chloreform or ether. Very truly yours, REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER

Avon SPRINGS, N.Y., Feb. 1, 1901. Gentlemen : I write the testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the words ful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as man ethere, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows on 150th street, New York, is once obtained a bettle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the first Nevember, I very seen noticed a radical improvement. After using one bett's be Asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms, I feel that I me consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing discan.

remedies, but they have all failed. I ran across your advortisement and started with trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle, and am ever grateful. I have family of four children, and for six years was unable to werk I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony ye

O, D, PHELPS, M.D.

S. RAPHAEL 67 East 129th st., New York City.

TRIAL BOTTLE SENT ABSOLUTELY FREE ON RECEIPT OF POSTAL Do not delay. Write at once, addressing DR, TAFT BROS', MEDICINE CO.,

Gentlemen : I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numero

Fast 130th St., N. Y. City. Sold by all Druggists.

PUMPS!

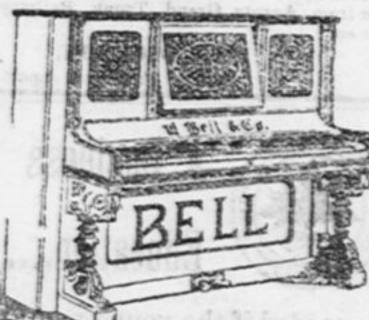

Do you want to buy the best pump in Canada? If so get one of the Dennis Patent Pumps. They draw water fast and work easy. We manufacture these pumps in different sizes in wood and iron, and will guarantee satisfaction with them in any depth of well up to 150 feet.

For Pumps, Pump Fixings and Repairs, also Call on_

SYLVESTER BROS. M'F'G CO., Lindsay.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER IN

Pianos and Organs.

I Recommend the BELL, the DOMINION and the MASON & RISCH.

In Sewing Machines the ROTARY STANDARD, the NEW WILLIAMS, the DOMES TIC and WHEELER & WILSON In Bicycles

the TRIBUNE and COLUMBIA

ORGANS REPAIRED Also THERMAL and VAPOR BATHS, all of which will k sold on liberal terms.

A few Second Hand Organs at from $3.00 to $25.00. I have six town lots for sale in a nice convenient locality, within five minutes walk of the market.

A Business Proposition.

We offer you a better investment .han Covernment Bonds. Better for three reasons.

1st.-Canada Life 5 per cent. Gold Bonds yield a much highe rate of interest than Government Bonds.

2nd .- They are paid for by instalments-thus placed within the reach of men without capital.

3rd.—They are insured. That is, should the investor die after paying only one instalment on his bonds, all his future payments to the Company would be immediately cancelled and the benefits of he investment would ot once become available.)

Ado to all these advantages the very material one that the invest or shares in the surplus earnings of this leading Company, and you have an opportunity for safe and profitable investment rarely equally A handsome booklet, giving a fu! explanation, will be sent on reque

R. WIDDESS,

AGENT, LINDSAY.

far tov estry lands. tion in increas diminut but is parent state! a far gards jority. is bec: by the were The estab! land w and b of pip burne Mr. of the Temag 1,460,0 from : board Lave b est fire The govern cel lice SAYS U timber taut is which remove largely seris, Borth 8 lying a broke a recloth: pine, w set asi licenses ed or to due samoun: sale of based walue the ter Accor forestr posal the b prises ! trees. and se combus militate moved. destro The Aigonor serves. lev res doing mands perman Reserve cludes ? the ens acres: Lake T COLSI the val value. possibil tanning ning to

Thirty have les in three 10 per York h a numb cent. 536.015 32,954 The ove

western thon th to a tal 2000