Are They and the Galicians Valuable Acquisitions in the Scttlement of Canada ?-Men Who Have Suffered for Conscience Sake Defended-The Debate Was Interesting-

Readings of Bills. April 13.—The House spent eight hours in the discussion of the Government's immigration policy yesterday. The subject was raised by Mr, Wilson on motion to go into supply, and the debate was participated in by most of the western members. The feature of the debate was Mr. McCreary's defence of the Government's policy. Late during the evening Mr. Clarke Wallace incidentally brought up the matter of the Fox Bay settlers, and the session ended with somewhat stormy scenes at 1 o'clock in the morning.

Postoffice Act Amendment. Acting Postmaster-Gen. Mr. Sutherland introduced in the House a bill to amend the Postoffice Act, the principal object of which is to authorize the establishment of dead letter offices at St. John, Kingston, London, Vancouver and Dawson, Another clause authorizes the department to employ "train porters," as growing, lusty boy was not given temporary mail clerks, in cases of unusually heavy newspaper mail, the idea being to save the expense of from his parents. sending out an extra railway mail The bill was read a first

The Immigration Policy.

On motion to go into supply, Mr. Wilson of Lennox criticized the immigration policy of the Government. He quite commended the distribution of Canadian text books in English schools, and thought they should also be sent to Germany, where emigration agents are not allowed to work. Dealing with the agencies, Mr. Wilson held that their cost was far more than the results warranted. Mr. W. F. McCreary, the Liberal member for Selkirk, who was formerly immigration commissioner at Winnipeg, said that while the best settlers were Ontario farmers, and next to them the people from the British Isles, both the Doukhobors and Galicians were making good settlers. The Doukhobors he described as cleanly in their homes, thrifty and industrious, Mr. McCreary was cheered when he said it was a disgrace for public men to cast aspersions upon people who had suffered so much for conscience sake. Mr. Mc-Creary paid a glowing tribute to Mr. Sifton, and said that immigrants were now pouring into the west at the rate of three train loads per day and that they were mostly persons of large means.

Mr. Jubel Robinson said that as the welfare of the country so largely depended upon the people brought into it, the Government could not be too careful as to the class of immigrants it induced to settle here. in whose constituency about half the Galicians in the country are settled,

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that Mr. Bennett had said that the Government had evinced a disposition, since we have been in office, to appoint to the bench only our political friends, whereas, in the earlier portion of his remarks, he had stated, with equal emphasis, that this Government had offered an appointment to Mr. Foy, who is not a friend of the Government, but an opponent.
