Paint Buyers

Whether you are going to apply the paint yourself or are buying it for someone else to apply, you ought to take great care to get full value for your money. It's not the paint that costs the least per gallon that is cheapest. It's the one that covers most surface, wears longest, and is easiest to apply. That paint is THE SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PAINT

We will furnish you a choice of three different color combinations free of charge, if you give us a photograph, drawing or description of your house, whether you buy paint of us or not.

What a Winnipeg Delegate to the World's Sunday School Convention at Jerusalem Saw on his Voyage to the Holy Land.

Mr. Allan L. Maclean, delegate to the World's Sunday School Convention at Jerusalem, sends the following letter to the Winnipeg Free Press from Algiers and Malta:

Algiers, at one time the home of the most rapacious set of pirates that ever scoured the Mediterranean Sea, is sighted at one o'clock Monday morning, the 21st of March, and the harbor, and city built on a range of hills rising in amphitheatrical form, all lit up, presents a charming appearance, under the starry North African sky. We anchor in the harbor, inside the breakwater built out into the sea by the enforced labor of some thirty thousand Christian slaves, who labored for three years or more at its construction. Algiers is a city of more than 100,000 inhabitants, built on the hillside overlooking the harbor. The French quarter is built up with massive blocks in great regularity. Hotels, business blocks and the chamber of commerce face the water, and rise upon a street carpeted upon a platform and approached by an inclined parallel with the street above. Through this section runs the electric street railway to the suburbs of the city with the difference of a few feet, and the difference of a few feet is made up by a travel first or second class as you wish. The sidewalks on many of the business streets are arched over the first story, forming an arcade along the street. This method of building excludes the sunlight from the front portion of stores and shops to a certain extent, but the landlord gains considerably by it as his shop is then from sight to the feet larger according to the width of the sidewalk, for the cost of the store is built above the first.

The Arab and the Moorish quarters are certainly more interesting in some respects, to a westerner, but less inviting. Here may be seen nearly every type of Oriental life; Moorish priests and Arabs in their unseemly manner of dress, Mohammedan men heavily veiled in white, the veils extending down over what they call their dress, which in Manitoba would be considered probably appropriate or even odd for a skating carnival, so long as the identity of the wearer was not revealed. Negroes with potato or rice sacks on their heads hanging down on their shoulders and back, ragged and unwashed boys and girls, begging from all tourists that pass the street, the men and old women sitting at the street corners begging, donkey loaded with sacks and baskets of vegetables and fruit, driven by a barefooted Arab, and vendors and traders of every description.

You justify against a strange mixture of humanity; Moors, Negro Arabs, Bedouins, copper colored Arabs, Turks, Egyptians, Maltese, Spaniards and various other nationalities peculiar to the sea, a sight to make us sore and hearts sick. The governor's palace is one of the sights of Algiers, built around an open court with a beautiful garden of palm, olive and rubber trees with a stone wall, eight or ten feet high, and reached by an entrance through a great iron gate, always locked. The palace overlooks the harbor and close by on the opposite side of the street is St. Philippe's cathedral, built in 1701. A short visit to the Grand Mosque and see the form of Mohammedan worship and hear the cold sermons and priests repeating and chanting the Koran, proved an interesting thing though the ventilation and odors of some of the small rooms or recesses into which we were taken, was not quite as refreshing as a salt sea breeze. A drive three miles up and around the hills, through beautiful parks, gardens and vineyards gives a delightful panoramic view of the city and harbor below. A pleasant and interesting day was spent by the passengers and no doubt it was a profitable day to many on land, for it took 200 calbs and carriages to carry the party through the city. We returned to the ship at 5 p.m., after the day's sight, congratulating ourselves that the programme allowed them only one day and they would be good sailing weather, they would be rested by the time we landed in the Mediterranean.

We sighted the rugged coast of the island of Malta, that historic island on Wednesday, March 22. The earliest Biblical tradition account given of this famous little island is about Feb. 10, A.D. 62, when the Apostle, St. John, with 275 other passengers, crew and prisoners, was wrecked in what is now known as St. Paul's Bay, about ten miles from Valletta, the capital, near the northwest corner of the island. The ancient capital was Citta, where Paul, after his trial, was held, and the Roman governor lived when Paul and his companions were kept in the island. The Government yesterday a report successively of the Turkish Government, the French Minister of Justice, and so on, bishop Bruchal officiating, and some of which was military stations in the island.

In A.D. 1530, Charles V. of France, ceded the island to the Knights of St. John, who had been driven out of Jerusalem, Cyprus, and other quarters, and they made Malta their home. The original deed under the seal of Charles V. may now be seen in the British archives in Valletta. In May, A.D. 1565, the Turkish fleet laid siege to the harbor and its forts, which lasted until September following, and the little band of Knights under their Grand Master, John La Vallette, then 70 years of age, and leader, held the island and repulsed the savage Turks with losses of 600 men, nearly twenty-five thousand men. Malta subsequently fell into the hands of Napoleon which he made a base for Europe, lasting from 1796 to 1815. Valletta, the capital, is built on the northern side of the harbor, fortified on a double-mountained hill, the whole island abounds with stone and rock. It would be impossible to burn it down, and no fleet of warships could

Millinery That You Will Wear.

Just Like New York Hats But Less Than Half The Price.

Our Millinery Department is not the largest in town, nor is it filled with freak hats. The Hats are wearable—with enough variation to give every normal face a setting that puts it at its best. It's growing popularity comes because its styles ring true. Because of its individuality—fitting the style to the individual—not moulding the individual to the style. Because of its exclusiveness every creation is a masterpiece, so original, so different from hats shown elsewhere. The exclusiveness of the stock is well known to those familiar with it, and we ask others to come and acquaint themselves with what we mean by millinery exclusiveness. Because we alone maintain very fair prices and they're within the reach of the most moderate purse. Because business is constantly active, and business means change; change means newness; and newness is the very soul of millinery. These are the kind of hats our customers will be wearing as soon as the sun unpacks his grip-full of warm weather. If you're not a customer here we invite you put us to the test, then we are assured of a share of your trade at least. The Charge was Dismissed.

Thos Lamb and Wesley Friso, the two men who were arrested at their homes near Seagrave last Thursday on a charge of criminal assault, were given several hearings before County Magistrate Deacon, and on Monday the charge against them being dismissed, the evidence against them being of a very unreliable character. Mr. Hugh O'Leary, K. C., thinks it was a most reprehensible thing to try these men from them in goal their families and keep them in a case that they had not received the serious consideration of the authorities, and it is just possible that there may be another enquiry in connection with the case.

Deserved a Better Fate.

Cobourg Star: Another death occurred in the infirmary ward of the goal on Tuesday morning. Dr. Burnham G. G. Demorest, who thirty or forty years ago was one of the best known practicing physicians in the East Riding of Northumberland, passed away under distressing circumstances. He practiced his profession at Norham, in Percy township, then removed to Sirdling, Hartburn, and afterwards to Warkworth. He was a gifted man, but after the death of his wife he became rather peculiar. He was at one time worth $60,000 to $70,000, but lost it in the Madoc gold mine and the village of Demorest, where he was the village doctor. He was the oldest living graduate in medicine of McGill University, having graduated in 1852. He was in his 79th year. His father was one of the Circuit Riders of the Methodist church in the early days of our country, and the village of Demorest was named after him. He was an enterprising man, and introduced the Champion stock of horses in this country. The cause of his death was arterial sclerosis, or the congealing of the blood in the veins. The body was interred beside that of his wife at Frankford. He was in and out of the infirmary several times at one time important character in our country deserved a better fate, but the best in life are not always the most fortunate.

THERE'S STYLE in glasses as well as in dress.

The deep-rooted objection to the use of glasses on the ground of unsightliness is entirely removed by the artistic effect produced by modern methods. Improperly fitted frames are both a disfigurement and a menace to health, the effect of a perfectly fitted lens being omitted by them.

We guarantee a perfect fit in both lenses and frames.
