ASSESSMENT PECULIARITIES.

(To the Editor of The Post.)

Sir,-With your permission I would like to try to answer a few of the objections that our mutual friend of the Watchman-Warder makes to my remarks on assessment: This whole question of assessment can afford to be thoroughly and honestly discus-rel we can only get people to think in all questions affecting the public, then this little discussion will not have been in vain. I must repel the gentle insinuation that I am either an supposed to have. I have no hesita-!

tion in saying, however, that there will be nothing approaching justice in taxation until all taxes are put upon the land and the land belongs to the people, whose ownership it should never have left. However, that is another question that will require a smarter man than I to I entirely agree, "that the dollar should be taxed wherever found,"

But I would go further and say that rich man generally has a good many dollars, laid away that the assessor knows nothing about and makes endeavor to find out. Take this vexed question of improvements, for-instance My point was, and I am sent the accusation warmly that when we ask the assessors to be instructed to pass these amprovements a "dois" from the public treasury or that we are asking them to disregard their oath. It is a well known fact assessed at their full cash value and There are dozens of houses in this town that can be pointed out, whose assessment is well known to be above their value, and why? Sim-time to appeal, and tle assessors know it. True the over-assessment is not much in each case, but that does not justify it in the least. But for argument's sake, suppose that the houses here in Lindsay that everyone knows cost 89,000 and $10,000 them yearly to keep them in repair, that are assessed at under $5,000.

Who pays for these dollars that are there and yet escape assessment? I claim that the assessors do not do their duty here, and am very much afraid that they have not the courage to do so. As I have remarked
