Youthful Horse thief Caught after Travelling over Sixty Miles.

Peterboro Review, June 8ch . One of the saddest and most deplored Meilia Man., Coormerly of Whitby, sights that we have ever had the misfortune to witness was the youthful horse thief, Earl Schweier, in police court yesterday. The charge speined so enormous, and when one glanced at the baby face in the dock, one could not failt o be sadly impressed by the sight. The little fellow not yet ten years old, and when sitting in the dock, not visible above the sides, did not seam to realize his position. and smilingly answered the questions the Police Magistrate put to him. He seemed almost proud of what he had done, and had bragged to the constables on his way to Peterboro about the masterly way he had managed the spirited horse. He had always been a very wayward boy, having bourded the train a couple of times for Port Hope, and several times ran away to farm houses surrounding the town. Newspapers and Magazines.

The July Delineator is a magazine display of Summer fashions is exquisite and complete, the fiction bright and entertaining, the special articles, clever and informative, and the rumber is rounded out by a series of practical papers on demostic topies. In fiction, interest centres in Mrs. Hugh Fraser's quaint love story of Japan. The Giver of Honour, although The Rebeltion of William Henry by Herminie Templeton, is thoroughly enjoyable, for both its keen humor and its real sympathy with boy nature. For young people there are entertaining stories and pastimes, and for needleworkers and householders many pages of useful information.

How We Are Building Our Reputation.

Once there was an old blind man who went to a meat market to buy a steak. The rubicund butcher chuckled to himself as he noticed the man's blindness. "Now," thought he, "here's a chance for me to get rid of a tough steak," and he sold him a steak that many had refused to buy.

The blind man discovered how he had been treated by the butcher when he attempted to eat the steak, so he told his friends how he had been imposed upon.

The word passed about the town and the butcher's customers left him one by one. Some Dry Goods stores make the very same mistake. They try to sell undesirable merchandise to their customers, thinking they will not know the difference, and like the butcher, they will not discover their mistake until it is too late.

When we sell an article of merchandise of any kind we see to it that it is of the sort that will make you want to come here again to trade-bring your friends, for we believe a store's best recommend is the intrinsic worth of its merchandise.

If we cannot secure and retain your trade by trustworthy merchandise we do not want it, because the store will never stoop to catch-penny schemes, such as offering you a grade of merchandise below our standard, with the idea that you will not know the difference.

We've a reputation at stake that we intend to maintain, and we believe that the very highest standard of merchandise at absolutely the lowest prices is the right way to build and maintain a lasting reputation. The following list of new and reliable summer goods is only one instance of how we
