POULTRY RAISERS' CORNER

Devoted to the Interests of Those Who Aim at the Raising and Production of First-class Poultry and Eggs.

(Correspondence Invited from County Poultry Fanciers and Farmers.)

PRACTICAL POULTRY POINTERS.

The poultry men — and women! — of this country are like a vast secret society whose password is "Friendship" and whose motto is, on should be, "Fair and square dealing with every one."

Should you become confused about some point, do not hesitate to write to some breeder, or editor of that department of your favorite paper. You are always assured of receiving a courteous reply and well wishes for your business.

One thing is often sadly neglected and yet it amounts to quite a sum within a year's time, and that is the two-cent stamp. Whether writing for a catalogue asking advice or what not, always enclose a stamp. It shows you are in earnest, and appreciate the time and thought it takes to write your reply. How many of the readers of this paper realize the amount of mail a prominent breeder receives in a day, week or year? And, if he would be obliged to pay two cents for each supply sent, what an amount it would mean to be deducted from his earnings each year. Remember you are better off while you to him may be well up in the hundreds of thousands.

Do not neglect to give your fowl green stuff in some shape or other each day or so. It is a quite special until spring and it has been several months since the birds have had fresh range, so change their food ration by including some of the many green foods at hand. Alfalfa or clover, steamed or placed before your pens in a hopper, is greatly appreciated by them. It should be included in their meals at least once a day, if steamed. Either of the above will add to the richness of the yolk of the egg, besides being a promoter of eggs in winter. How much more appetizing it is to have an egg, either fried, poached or boiled, with a thin water dressing. The latter kind may be avoided by the use of green stuffs.

To promote the egg yield, place in each pen a dish or pan of heavy wheat bran, to which has been added some part of fine beef scraps or three of bran.

Should you intend to build this coming spring, study well the plans, and in buying lumber be sure it is dry. A damp house has caused many a failure on the poultryman's side and a diseased flock on the other. Keep your water tight and charcoal before your flock at all times, have your houses ventilated, but avoid drafts, and with the scratching material deep enough to keep the chickens working for their grain you are assured of a healthy flock and a profitable business.

A YEAR'S RECORD OF EGGS.

While it is generally acknowledged that there is money in keeping poultry on the farm, not many of the farmers through the middle west keep an account of what their poultry produces and are therefore unable to make more than a guess at the returns from this branch of the farming industry. If there is any place where poultry ought to pay, it is on the farm where range is almost unlimited and the various grains suitable to their needs can be produced at the very minimum of cost. Perhaps it is these natural advantages that lead to a sort of indifferent way of caring for the poultry, a way that cuts deeply into the profits that might be derived from this source. Too often this neglect and indifference is carried to the extent that if an accurate account was kept it would be found that the poultry had been kept at an actual loss. No matter how little it costs to keep poultry on the farm where food is cheap and plentiful, it can hardly be said to be business to keep no account whatever and go on the theory that whatever returns the poultry brings will be enough to pay for the cost. Continued next week.

Get Rid of the Burdocks.
The Town Improvement Committee suggest to our citizens the advisability of destroying the unsightly burdocks that disgrace so many of our streets. If these are cut below the leaf crown they will not grow again, or a small quantity of coal oil poured in the centre of the plant will also destroy it.

Sore Muscles.

Prominent athletes throughout the country find that the best treatment for sore muscles after severe exercise or hard work of any kind, is a hot bath at bed time which opens the pores. This should immediately be followed with an application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm vigorously rubbed into the skin. This liniment removes all stiffness and soreness and has become a favorite rub down as it acts promptly and keeps the muscles in excellent condition. For sale by all druggists.

The Man With a Hoe.

(The Weekly Sun.)
There is a lack of sympathy, with and appreciation of, the man with a hoe. You feel this when you mingle with members of the Legislature or Parliament; the fact is borne in upon you in any circle made up of the dominating classes in cities, and in all educational circles.

Among the classes spoken of, when social pleasures are not the subject of conversation, the talk naturally turns toward the fortune of the lucky mining speculator, the manufacturer made rich by the combine formed behind the tariff wall, the wealth of the skillful manipulator of franchises, and the doings of the Captains of Finance generally. The work of the man in the fields, on whose industry and intelligence all the fancy superstructure rests, is hardly ever heard of. Means to advance his prosperity are scarcely mentioned. Not one seems to care how great the burden of taxation which is shifted from one to another until it finally rests on the back of the great producer of wealth.

There should be more men of the hoe in Parliament. Then the foundation industry of the country would receive some of the attention which its importance warrants.

A Costly House-boat.

Mr. J. H. McGill, of Washington, D.C., who is related to the General Manager of the Ontario Bank, has been in Lindsay since June 1st supervising the construction by Messrs. Baker and Bryans of a house-boat after a rather novel plan. Mr. McGill has spent his holidays on the Kawartha lakes for some years past, and his experience has taught him a few things. In making his plans he eschewed the leaky row for pontoon style and stipulated for a solid timber raft, 20x10 feet and 30 inches thick, made of three tiers of 10x10 boom sticks bolted together in transverse layers with 1 inch steel bolts, of which a ton was required. On this stout foundation a two-story frame residence is being constructed, which is to be finished in first-class style. The floor will be a foot above the raft and in rough weather the waves will sweep underneath the dwelling without meeting any obstruction. The house-boat will be towed from one lake to another by a steamer, and anchored in any desired spot. Mr. McGill has a fine gasoline yacht which he will use for making excursions, returning to his floating dwelling when the fancy seizes him. It is said the outfit will represent an outlay of $5,000.

HEADED BY BISHOPS.

12,000 Lancashiremen, in 33 Special Trains, Go to London to Object to the Educational Bill.

London, June 9.—Thirty-three special trains brought to London yesterday morning 12,000 Lancashire churchmen to protest against the education bill. The protesters proceeded to Regent's Park, where they massed and accompanied by bands of music, and carrying banners, marched through the principal thoroughfares to Albert Hall. The procession was headed by the Bishops of London and Manchester, and included many clergymen.

The chief resolution submitted to the meeting recorded an emphatic protest against the bill on the ground that it is destructive of all forms of religious instruction in the elementary schools, and contained the assertion that the only true safeguard of religious education in the schools is a continuation of the denominational schools.

The visitors for the most part were factory employes, forming a typically Lancashire crowd, but all classes were represented, and they all came at their own expense. Consequently the protest was more significant than most of such demonstrations.

POISON CAUSED ALLEN'S DEATH.

Proceedings Against Man and Woman Dropped, Murder Not Proved.

Brookville, June 9.—"That the said Henry Allen came to his death at Lansdowne, Dec. 13, 1905, through poison, but whether as food or administered by parties with malice aforethought, we are unable to determine, but from the evidence presented to us thus far believing it points more strongly to the latter."

The above verdict was rendered by the coroner's jury empanelled at Lansdowne to hear the evidence relating to the death of Allen, who was a farmer in that locality. A phase of the case was thought to implicate Mrs. Allen, the testimony of William O'Connor, a farm hand, employed by Allen, forming the basis of this suspicion on account of her alleged relations with him before and after her husband's death.

O'Connor went so far as to swear that Mrs. Allen asked him to marry her if she disposed of Allen. The question of the purchase of arsenic by O'Connor resulted in him being taken into custody with Mrs. Allen a month ago, when the inquest was first opened and adjourned to get an analysis of the contents of Allen's stomach. Traces of arsenic were found, but Prof. Ellis thought that as the embalming fluid contained much of that poison he could not say how the arsenic had been used.

The charges against Mrs. Allen and O'Connor, which still rest in the justice of the peace's court will now be dropped unless something new turns up, which is not in sight at present.

A. F. JURY ON STAND AGAIN

Tells What He Knows of the Labor Bureau—Vanity One Cause of Differences Between W. T. R. Preston and His Agents in England—Evidence Characterized as Not Genuine—Witness Sarcastic.

Ottawa, June 8.—The meeting of the Parliamentary Committee on Agriculture yesterday morning witnessed some lively altercations between members and scraps of spicy evidence from the witness, Mr. Alfred Jury.

At the opening of the committee Mr. Jury explained that he was in error at a former examination when he said that he had asked Mr. MacDonald of Fictou to put certain questions to him and that the member declined.

Mr. Monk asked him to explain what he meant by saying he had applied for shares in the North Atlantic Trading Co., and Mr. Jury replied by reading a letter he sent to Mr. Preston, asking, sarcastically, for shares. It was obviously not a sincere application. Mr. Monk asked the reason of the disagreeable relationship between Mr. Jury and Mr. Preston.

"I object to that question," interposed Mr. Carvell.

"Are you solicitor for the defence?" asked Mr. Spry.

"I am a member of the committee," replied Mr. Carvell, somewhat warmly.

"You're too cross," said Mr. Derbyshire.

Some Vanity in It.

Mr. Jury went on to say that he learned from the agents that Mr. Preston did not advertise their official positions, while he always advertised his own.

"Some vanity in it?" suggested a member.

"Yes," said Mr. Jury, "some vanity on both sides."

Mr. Wright of Muskoka made a little speech to the effect that the committee should not insist on ascertaining how the witness knew things. As long as he knew them it was all right.

"Very good," commented Mr. Derbyshire on these remarks.

"Oh, we don't care for that elephantine wit," retorted Mr. Wright.

"The greatest physical development surpasses his mental development."

"You've got a sweeted hat this morning," answered Mr. Derbyshire, not disconcerted, "but you did very well, better than I thought."

Not Genuine Evidence.

Mr. Monk asked if Mr. Jury could tell why Mr. Preston took so much interest in Leopold's labor bureau.

Mr. MacDonald, Mr. Ethier, and Mr. Carvell all contended that this answer could not be genuine evidence. Mr. Jury's opinion as to a man he disliked should not be taken.

Mr. Jury read a letter which he thought was a threat by Mr. Preston that he would establish more labor bureaus.

Mr. Carvell would not let the witness pass judgment of this kind.

"Are you and Mr. Preston enemies?" asked Mr. Blair.

"Not very friendly," said the witness.

"Don't call me Preston," added the witness a moment later, when he was inadvertently given that name by Mr. Carvell.

Mr. Jury took issue with Mr. Preston's statement that Louis Leopold was a friend of the Government. Mr. Jury claimed to have seen Leopold booking passengers behind the backs of the proper owners of this bureau.

Preston's Property.

"Who does own the bureau?" asked Mr. Blair.

W. T. R. Preston or Preston & Co.," answered the witness.

Mr. Jury read a letter from Rev. Leonard Dewaan, in which it was stated that Mr. Preston recommended him to go to Leopold for his ticket.

"Preston is gone to Canada to get your scalp, was the advice Jury said and he gave up with regard to his traveling expenses.

Mr. Jury said Mr. Preston did not at once report him after the first learned of his plan of changing first-class fare and traveling third-class.

"I always travel first-class now," said Mr. Jury, "and charge as up the country does not make anything out of it. They only do me out of my treating money—that's all."

Preston Should Fly.

He did not know how Mr. Preston traveled, "but I think he should fly," said the witness, "he is so good, you know. He has wings."

Mr. Jury was of opinion that immigration propaganda ought to be carried on just as well by booking agents as by the North Atlantic Trading Co. Mr. Jury was discharged as a witness.

A motion of Mr. Monk's, to recommend the adoption of means to protect Canadian labor from the operations of the Labor Bureau in London, was defeated. An amendment carried reporting the evidence at once to the House as it has been taken.

SIR HECTOR IS DEAD

Death of a Once Prominent Leader at Quebec.

GREAT CAREER WAS MARRED

A Canadian Political Tragedy of the Most Sombre Character, But Bright Spot is That He Was One of the "Fathers of Confederation"—A Loyal Party Man and an Able Administrator.

Quebec, June 12.—Sir Hector Langevin died last night at 8:45 o'clock at his residence, St. Louis street, surrounded by his two surviving daughters, Mrs. Chapais and Mrs. Climon, and their husbands, Hon. T. Chapais and Mr. Justice Climon. Deceased, who had been in failing health for some years past, had been able to get up to a week before his death, when he was seized with cerebral congestion, followed by congestion of the lungs, which caused his death.

A Political Tragedy.

There has been no tragedy in Canadian politics more sombre than that of the latter days of Sir Hector Langevin. Of an illustrious family that for generations has given leaders to both Church and State, Sir Hector began life under the fairest auspices. His father was an Assistant Secretary of State under Gosford and Sydenham. His mother was the daughter of Major La Force, a prominent figure of the war of 1812, and one of his maternal ancestors commanded the British squadron on Lake Ontario during the war of the revolution. Hector Langevin was born in the city of Quebec on August 25, 1828, and before his twentieth year was a law student and the editor of the Journal of Agriculture. He studied first with the late Hon. A. N. Morin, and afterwards in the office of Sir George Cartier. The Conservative leader liked the silent young fellow, and in return Langevin gave him most loyal friendship and service. He was called to the Bar in 1850, and made slow progress for some years. In 1856 he entered Quebec civic politics and began to make himself felt as a manager of men, and as an intermediary between the ultramontane leaders and the laity. In 1857 he became Mayor of Quebec, editor of the Courier du Canada and member for Dorchester in the Assembly of Canada. Here he proved one of Cartier's most valued lieutenants, and in 1864 joined the Tache-Macdonald Ministry as Solicitor-General (East). Later he changed this portfolio for that of Postmaster-General. Mr. Langevin was one of the "managers" of the confederation movement going in his own silent way. His primary work the Cartier, voluble, forceful and impatient, could not have accomplished. In the Charlottetown and Quebec conferences he took an important part and will always be gratefully remembered as one of the "Fathers of Confederation." He held office from confederation till 1873, for the greater part of the time as Minister of Works. He became leader of the Blues on Cartier's death, and when Sir John Macdonald came back to power in 1878 he once more became a member of the Cabinet. From 1879 till 1891 he was Minister of Public Works.

This is neither the time nor the place to tell the story of the revelations of 1891, that will go down to history as the Langevin-McGreevy scandal. The Minister of Works was driven from his post by the force of outraged public opinion. His friends declared that his great loyalty to his party and his chief induced him to take silently upon his own shoulders the political sins of many. He sat in the Commons for five years after the painful episode of 1891, but only rose upon two or three occasions to address the House. In 1896 he retired from public life and since that time had lived quietly in Quebec.
