Dear Sir,-If you will permit me to take up a small bit of space in your paper, I would like to enter a proplace in this fair village on Saturday evening, the 20th inst. Two immigrant' women who live with their husbands at a nearby place, women. During the afternoon and evening the people loitered around one of the so-called hotels of the place and were sold liquor until they became so intoxicated that the wo men were una de to take pare of their papies and finally negrected them entirely and entered into a regular drunken dight, using language undit for decent people tto listen 10, and tearing each other's clothes almost off their backs.

Now, I understood thate is a law to prevent hotelmen selling liquor, to done here to have this law enforced. So far as I am gole to learn, it is the custom here to fine the man who gets drunk, and let the hotelkeeper man becomes so regardless of common decency as to dish out his accurred stuff to women-especially to wotil they are unable to stand up, it i surely time for the respectable cit, zens of the place to take a haad and see what can be done to stop in Some people may say that the wowhich is quite true, but in my op-inion people who are addicted to such a habit are to be pitied, and are doserving of sympathy rather than censure.
