BETH CELERT.

The spearmen heard the bugle sound, And chearily smiled the morn; And many a brach and many a nound Attend Llewellyn's horn.

And still he blew a louder blast, And gave a louder cheer; Come. Gelert, why are thou the fast Llewellyn's horn to hear?

In sooth, he was a peerless hound, The gift of Royal John; But now no Gelert could be found, And all the chase rode on. tional Exhibition, Toronto, this year And now, as over rocks and dells,

The gallant chidings rise; All Snowdon's craggy chaos yells With many mingled cries. That day Llewellyn little loved The chase of hart and hare;

And small and scant the booty For Gelert was not there.

Unpleased, Llewellyn homeward hied, When, near the portal scat, His truant Gelert he espied, Eounding his lord to great.

But when he gained the castle door, Aghast the chieftain stood; The hound was smeared with gouts His lips and fangs ran blood.

Llewellyn gazed with wild surprise, Unused such looks to meet; His favorite check'd his joyful guise, And crouch'd and lick'd his frot.

Onward in haste Llewellyn pass'd -And on went Gelert, too, And still, wheree'er his eyes were Fresh blood-gouts shock'd his view

O'erturned the infant's bed he found The blood-stained covert rent; And all around, the walls and ground With recent blood besprent.

He call'd his child-no voice replied He search'd-with terror wild; Blood! blood! he found on every But nowhere found the child!

'Hell-hound! by thee my child's devoured!' The frantic father cried;

And to the hilt his vangeful swore He plunged in Gelert's side. His suppliant, as to earth he fell,

No pity could impart; But still Gelert's dying yell Pass'd heavy o'er bis heart. Aroused by Gelert's dying yell,

Some slumberer waken'd nigh; What words the parent's joy can tel! To hear his infant cry! Conecal'd beneath a mangled heap His hurried search had missed,

All glowing from his rosy sleep, His cherub-boy he kiss'd! Nor scratch had he, nor harm, not dread-

But the same couch beneath Lay a great wolf, all torn and Tremendous still in death! Ah! what was then Llewellyn's pain!

For now the truth was clear; The gallant bound the wolf had slain, To save Llewellyn's heir. Voin, vain, was all Lllewellyn's wo:

Best of thy kind, adicu! The frantic deed which laid thee low, This heart shall ever rue!'

And now a gallant tomb they raise With costly sculpture dack'd; And marbles storied with his praise, Poor Gelert's bones protect.

Here never could the spearman pass, Or forester, unmoved; Here oft the tear-besprinkled grass Llewellyn's sorrow proved.

And here he hung his born and spear, And, oft as evening fell, In fancy's piercing sounds would hear Poor Gelert's dying yell! -Hon W. R. Spencer.
