BURNED TO DEATH AT FENELON FALLS. Shocking Fatality This Morning in the Northern Village.

Residence of Mr. Lane, Bricklayer, Consumed—His Bed-ridden Mother-in-law the Victim—Two Persons Injured.

Evening Post of Aug. 13. The village of Fenelon Falls was again visited by fire this morning, and, sad to relate, an aged bed-ridden woman lost her life in the flames. Shortly after 1 o'clock a. m. the frame dwelling of Mr. Lane, bricklayer, situated about one hundred yards north of the Grand Trunk station, was discovered to be on fire. Mr. Lane was away from home, and Mrs. Lane barely had time to arouse her family of five or six children. One daughter who had to leap from an upstairs window sustained painful injuries. When she had gathered her children at a neighbor's she enquired as to the whereabouts of her mother. Mrs. McGinnis, an aged lady who had occupied a room on the ground floor. No one had seen her, and the huge crowd then present felt they were on the verge of a tragedy. By this time the dwelling was on fire in every part, yet this fact did not delay a young man named W. W. Swain, who had just returned from making a determined although unsuccessful attempt to penetrate to the room pointed out. A few minutes later the roof fell in, carrying down the floor below, and a shudder inspired by horror passed over the crowd at thought of the dreadful fate of the aged inmate of the home. In the meantime the flames spread to the brick house adjoining, occupied by Mr. Fred Scott, who had had time to remove the contents. The building was destroyed, but the energetic work of the crowd prevented the further spread of the flames. Dr. Aldous, son of Hotelkeeper Aldous, while protecting the roof of a nearby grain warehouse by means of wet blankets, missed his footing and fell a distance of 15 or 20 feet, alighting on the railroad track. He was badly injured. Miss Lane, who leaped from an upper window, had her ankle broken or badly strained. This morning the charred remains of the victim were found in the ruins. It is supposed she was suffocated by the smoke before the alarm was given.

Mr. Bryans took a more northerly route to Edmonton and has not returned as yet.

Greenhorns in a Canoe.

Two Englishmen, "well jagged," to cite a slang expression, and a canoe, figured in an exciting mix-up on Saturday evening last, near the Wellington-st. bridge. Neither man had the faintest knowledge of the method of handling a canoe, and their inexperienced condition made matters worse. The result was to be expected—the canoe "turned turtle," leaving its occupants struggling in the water, and spilling their supply of "grub," liquors and extra clothing. Fortunately the water was shallow, and the incident created more amusement among the onlookers than anything else. If the water had been deeper the occurrence might have had a more serious ending.

OBITUARY

Col. James Deacon, Lindsay.

News of the death of Lieut.-Col. James Deacon, which occurred at an early hour Sunday morning, was received by all classes of citizens with expressions of profound regret, the feeling being accentuated by the knowledge that, whilst the deceased had been ailing for some months, the end had been hastened by an untoward occurrence. The Colonel had recovered sufficiently to be able to walk about the house occasionally, and on Saturday evening, while out on the balcony of his bedroom for a few minutes, essayed to light his pipe without assistance. The breeze blew the flame against his dressing-gown, and before members of the family downstairs could reach him and smother the flames the Colonel had received severe yet not necessarily fatal burns. In his impaired state of health, however, the shock proved too much, and the old veteran passed peacefully away at about 4 o'clock Sunday morning. Col. Deacon was a retired captain in the British army, being attached to the 1st Royal Scots, and served in the Crimean war at the battles of Alma, Balaklava, Inkerman and Sebastopol. He also served for many years in India. He came to Lindsay in the early sixties, and about 1868 became Lieut.-Colonel in the 45th Battalion, and at once became a prominent figure in organizing his several companies to a commendable state of efficiency. At the time of the Reil rebellion his soldierly qualities stood him in good stead, and his services were appreciated by the Government. The Colonel held many medals for distinguished services rendered. Besides his career as a soldier he also had qualities that made him a valuable citizen, and he served the town of Lindsay in many positions, having been a member of the School Board for years, and also Reeve and Mayor for successive terms. He was also Police Magistrate for the county of Victoria until recently failing health compelled him to relinquish the responsibilities of the office. The town flag was flying at half-mast as a deserved token of respect

JOHN MCCLARY IS A GREAT CAPTAIN OF INDUSTRY.

Formerly Owner of a Small Tinshop, Now Head of the Largest Stove and Tinware Concern Under the British Flag.

To very few men is the privilege given of witnessing such a celebration as that of which Mr. John McClary, of London, was the centre during the week that ended on July 13. For during the week a series of splendid jubiliations marked what was the sixtieth anniversary of the McClary Manufacturing Company. To only a few men is it given to see their business grow to such immense success, as that achieved by Mr. McClary, but fewer still are granted the happiness of enjoying, with undimmed keenness of intellect, the celebration of his sixtieth birthday. This was Mr. McClary's pleasant experience, and in his enjoyment of it he has had the felicitations of his great army of employees and of friends from ocean to ocean. The sixtieth anniversary is noteworthy, not only because it relates to the largest concern of its kind under the British flag, but because it has thrust before the attention of the people of Canada a man whose achievements make him one of the very greatest captains of industry this country has yet produced. John McClary is a Napoleon, but unlike the destructive leader of France whose career brought but desolation, he is a Napoleon of the arts of peace, who has made homes grow and brought prosperity and comfort to thousands of people. To John McClary the past sixty years has meant a change from the possession of a small tinshop to the possession of the largest establishment of its kind in Canada. The Company's plant in London now covers two enormous blocks of land, which there are also important establishments in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Hamilton and St. John's. Over 1,000 employees are on the company's pay rolls, of whom over seven hundred are married men, supporting homes. More than $600,000 is paid in wages annually. There are a few figures which will give the reader an impression of the size of the plant as it is at present and of its importance to the community. Mr. McClary has always been and is still the guiding head of this tremendous business. He remains even at his present age a man of unusual and remarkable ability. A man of great business foresight and sound judgement, he was one of the first to see the approaching development of Western Canada and with it many years prosperity for all Canada. He early backed his judgement in this respect by planning to meet this development, with the result that nowhere in Canada is the name McClary better known than in the newly settled sections of the West. He has always been and remains one of the most enterprising business men in Canada; sparing no money or pains to attain an end that his judgement told him could be won. This is well illustrated in the magnificent advertising campaigns this company has entered into in all the Canadian papers, which have made the McClary products known in all the homes from ocean to ocean. Though the McClary Company is Mr. McClary's first care and its success his greatest gratification, it is not the only successful company that shares in the benefit of his business acumen and experience. He is also President of the London Life Insurance Company and the Ontario Loan and Debenture Company, and a director of the London & Western Trusts Company. It is not generally known that Mr. McClary is a descendant of one of the most famous families of the United States—the celebrated Adams family of Massachusetts, his grand-mother having been a niece of John Quincy Adams, the second President of the United States, and first cousin of the sixth President, also John Quincy Adams. Another ancestor, General Stark, fought for England against the revolutionists. It will thus be seen that he comes of stock which is used to the accomplishment of big enterprises. Mr. McClary's general health is so good now that he will undoubtedly enjoy many years more watching the continued development of the business he started sixty years ago.
